The New Orleans Exhibition is in debt over two hundred thousand dollars. What will its debts be in May when it is to close? Call the newspaper men of the northern States to the help of the concern. They will tell their readers what is there.

The McVeytown Journal, of last week, says: A strange freak of nature. A small pyramid of earth has arisen on Isaac Long's place near Mattawana, it is about forty feet at the base, and from 18 to 20 feet high. Thirty rods off from its summit a blue sulphurous smoke, can be seen quite readily from the P. R. R., it is worth investigation.

Joseph Guyer, formerly of this county, was killed while at work in an elevator, at Hastings, Nebraska, on the 31st day of December, 1884. His coat was caught by a rapidly revolving shaft and he was thrown to the floor, his head striking the floor first, and with such force that his neck was broken. A wife and three children mourn his loss.

A vigilance committee for several towns in West Va., has been organized, for the purpose of getting rid of thieves. The thieves had better reform or seek other quarters. The vigilants do not propose to sue, they propose to hang. It is a bad state of affairs when society must turn from channels of the law to protect itself from the work of bad men.

A few days ago a tramp supplied himself with a suit of underclothing from the wash line in the yard of W. J. Marks in Patterson, but before he had time to put them on his back the theft was discovered and the thief was required to hand over the stolen goods. The thief promised to never steal again and on that promise was left go without a prosecution.

It turns out that the Democratic national committee is between one and two hundred thousand dollars in debt. It will not be hard to raise that amount of money if they assess every Democrat that wants an office. They had better assess them before Cleveland gets into office, for the fellows that will be left out will not pay after they are certain that the door has been shut against them. There is no charge for this suggestion to the unterrified.

The Altoona Tribune says, down in Huntingdon county, because her husband refused to get up and build fire in the stove on the morning of the 3rd inst., Mrs. C——, of Newburg, Todd township, became so enraged that she thrashed her sire and then called on a neighbor until the fire was kindled and time for breakfast had passed away. The parties have been before the county court several times on account of domestic troubles and I suppose that will be the result of the recent encounter.

The county commissioners have given the county printing to two Democratic papers in this county. It would have been justice to the Republican tax payers of Juniata had they ordered official advertising to be printed in the columns of a widely read newspaper such as the SENTINEL AND REPUBLICAN, however, the Republican taxpayers of Juniata shall not suffer, for all matters that pertain to public cost shall be published in these columns from time to time as they occur.

The Huntingdon Globe, of the 8th inst., says: Last Friday morning at about 4 o'clock Simon Garlic met his death at the hands of John Gordon, night watchman in the store of Lewis Lashley, in Cheyneyville, Bedford county, Garlic had climbed into the store-room through a window and taken what money was in the drawer, some $7 or $8, when Gordon leveled a shotgun at him, telling him at the same time to surrender. Instead of doing this Garlic seized the point of the gun and attempted to take it from Gordon. In the struggle the gun was discharged the contents entering Garlic's left side and killing him almost instantly. The deceased was a son of Adam Garlic, of Cheyneyville. Gordon went to Bedford and gave himself over to the authorities.

The Bloomfield Times of last week says: On Friday last, Mrs. Garlin, wife of Mr. Wm. Garlin, of Centre township, fell and broke her arm. * * * Henry Finnicle, of Rye twp., is the owner of a calf that weighed 191 pounds when one day old. * * * The hog disease is making bad work in Fishing Creek Valley. John Kell has lost ten head, while others have lost from one to half a dozen hogs each. * * * A good horse belonging to Etter & Yohn, of Newport, dropped down and shortly died as a city salesman was driving him from Markleville to Newport a few days ago. * * * One morning lately, Charles Taylor who teaches the Cove school, walked into his school house and found the coal-stove heated to such a degree that it was about ready to melt. On further examination of the room he found a tramp, quietly reposing in one corner. "What time is it," asked the tramp. "Time for you to skip," said Taylor. He skipped.

Kennedy J. Mytan, of Petersburg, Huntingdon county, relates the following remarkable yet true story: About the first of October last his flock of hogs, 37 in number, took the hog cholera, and on the 24th day of November they were all dead but one nice fat hog that would weigh about 250 pounds. This hog he determined to shoot as it showed symptoms of getting the disease, and would not eat anything. On Monday, the 24th of November, he became so busily engaged in threshing wheat that he did not kill the hog. It laid down where the straw was being thrown out and during the five days of threshing the straw was piled upon the hog the men not knowing it was there. Nothing was again seen of the hog until Tuesday, the 30th day of December, when it came out from under the straw pile as lively as a cricket, but slim as a rail and with scarcely any hair on. It is now sound and well, and eats greedily. The hog had been thirty-five days without food or water, and so astonished was Mr. Myton when he saw it he thought it was a hog ghost.—News.

Guilty of Murder.

Between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock on the night of August 21, 1884, Curtin McClain aged 20 years, after engaging in an assault upon two brothers named Byler, at the outskirts of the Juniata Valley Camp Meeting grounds at Newton Hamilton, pursued at a run, a man named William Smearman, of Huntingdon, and when he overtook him stuck a butcher knife into Smearman's back one time. The knife passed between the 9th and 10th rib upwards, through left lung into the left side of the heart. The wound produced almost instant death. The murderer was arrested the next day and taken to Lewistown jail where he remained till on the 13th of January, 1885, when he was arraigned to answer for the murder. The jury retired from the box with the case on Friday January 16, and returned with a verdict of murder in the first degree about midnight on Saturday January 17, 1885. The court has not pronounced sentence, but sooner or later the last scene of the tragedy will be enacted in the yard of the Lewistown jail by the hanging of the young man who engaged in warring upon those who were pursuing the peaceful ways of human society.

The Great Brooklyn Bridge.

The engineers have at last made the "grip" a success upon the New York and Brooklyn Bridge Railroad. But this is weak compared to the grip which the Florence Oil Stove has upon the minds of the people. It cooks and heats, is made in large and small sizes, and has every fixture any one could wish. Call upon local dealer, or write for particulars to Florence Machine Company, Florence, Mass.

The Chicago Railroad Exposition.

The recent Railroad Exposition in Chicago revealed the gigantic strides made by genius and capital in the field of transportation. Another remarkable thing is the development of the Florence Oil Stove for cooking and heating. It was the first in its field in point of time; is now conceded to be first in superiority, and will continue to receive the awards and medals wherever exhibited, and the praises of all who use them.
