About 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon young Sweeney and James McManamy were playing about the clay crusher, when Sweeney made a misstep and fell into the crusher. This is an old game of swindling. It is said that these vagrants picked up a goodly sum of money.

The New York Independent remarks: Oregon, Vermont and Maine have held state elections since the President launched his Free Trade Message upon the country; and in each instance the Republicans have triumphantly won the day. The plain indications are that the public mind is drifting against Cleveland and the Democratic Party. It would not be at all surprising if the Republicans should carry every Northern and Western State. * * * The Democrats of York state, in their recent convention, said: "We oppose all sumptuary laws," by which they meant laws properly restricting the liquor traffic, as their practice abundantly shows. This suits the liquor interest, and was intended as a bid for the rum vote. Prohibitionists will do a very unwise thing if they so vote as to put themselves in virtual alliance with the rum vote, and thus indirectly help to elect the rum candidate.

An exchange says: Judge Furst, of the Huntingdon Centre District, having been over-ruled by the associate judges of Huntingdon in the matter of license for that county, now seems determined to enforce the law against selling liquor without license. When the constables' returns were presented to him he found the return for the town of Huntingdon deficient in that it did not state the fact that private club rooms and other similar places were conducted there for the sale of liquor without license, no license whatever for that county having been granted under the demand of the associate judges. Judge Furst stated that he had knowledge of these places, and directed the constable to amend his report so as to include them. The matter has greatly stirred up the town. It is understood that those who are members of the clubs in question will do all in their power to maintain what they claim is their right. It has been determined by the courts in Philadelphia that clubs organized for the purpose of evading the License Law cannot stand, and as these Huntingdon clubs seem to be of this character—clubs which would have had no existence if liquor license had been granted in the county—it is undoubtedly Judge Furst's intention to have them closed up under the law.

From the Irish World.

Grover spoke up for Free Trade one day—
He hasn't done anything since.
He wrote that Message when Dan was away—
And he hasn't said anything since.

Poor Dan was broke up, and said, "Sire,
'tis done"—
He hasn't said anything since.
Looked sadly at Grover, and then he went home—
And hasn't said anything since.

Grover was sorry he had mentioned Free
Trade—
And he hasn't said anything since.
He saw by Dan's face the break he had made—
So he hasn't said anything since.

When the Sixth comes around he will find his mistake;
With Harrison and Morton we'll give him
the shake.
If my vote will elect Harrison don't be afraid
Of poor Grover C. and his English Free
Trade

Rider's Dog.

L. D. Rider, of Rye township, had a dog that gets into trouble of a peculiar kind. For some time Mrs. Oliver Albright has been annoyed by the loss of articles from around the kitchen and hen coop. At last Mr. Albright set a trap in the basement and fastened the chain to the leg of a sink. During the night a wonderful racket was heard, and Oliver, in undress uniform, made a rush for the basement where he found a dog belonging to Mr. Rider fast in the trap. For some minutes there was a picnic around there, but pluck eventually won and the dog was let loose and made a straight streak for home. On the following Tuesday morning Mrs. Alright missed a large tin coffee pot she had kept near the swill-barrel as a dipper. On the following Friday a peculiar object was seen in the field by Mrs. Myers who called the attention of some of Speck's threshers to the matter, and all concluded that it was some monstrosity that ought to be investigated, which they proceeded to do. It proved to be Rider's dog, which had pushed his head so far down in the coffee pot that he could not draw it out, and in that condition the poor animal had been for three days. For some time they were not able to get the dog out, but at last Mr. Albright took the coffee pot and by giving it a sharp jerk like cracking a whip the dog flew out and at once left for parts unknown. It is now to be hoped that Rider's dog will keep away from Albright's.—Bloomfield Times.
