Democrats in Lewistown.

All last week the watchword among the Democracy was "on to Lewistown" and during all that time a number of leaders were busily engaged in drumming up a crowd to attend a grand rally of the unterified at the capital town of Mifflin county.

The bait they threw out to catch the rank and file of the party was a handsome white plug hat. To get a hat of that kind for 99cts or for nothing was something so tempting that between one and two hundred of the brethern eagerly caught it and took up the pilgrimage for Lewistown.

They gathered at the station in force and many of them sported the red bandanna, and some of the more thoughtless ones began a throwing of missiles at a small flag—the stars and stripes—that a patriot had suspended from a second story window of of the Patterson House. The occupant of the room noticed the assault upon the stars and stripes, but he did not say, as Gen. Dix said:

"If any man pull down the American flag shoot him."

But he called out in stentorian voices "Let the stars and stripes alone, the flag is good enough for me."

They left in the 6 p. m. train in high feather for their destination.

They presented quite a nice appearance and the handsome plugs on their heads were of sufficient inspiration to cause them to forget all about the mud. They were so much surprised at the improved appearance the new head gear gave them that they could not help to ok at and admire each other. The ejaculations of admiration were frequent. They seemed converted into a mutual admiration club bent on having everybody see their hats, and so taken were they with the novelty of the hat enterprise, that if the mud had been ankle deep they would have gone through without feeling or seeing.

They were cordially received by about 300 Mifflin county white plug hat inspiring heathen that had been gathered from all parts of the district. The Juniata club in the big procession preserved its individuality and were conspicuous in the line of march.

While the procession moved there were a number of unique character representations, a few of which our special artist caught by instantaneous process for this article in the Sentinel and Republican.

A band or two presented an unique sight.

These two old stagers that move along so sedately represent the sympathizing element before and during the "wah sah." Their number is small but they are as they used to be and are still wondering what good can come out of Nazareth. They have a sort of dazed knowledge of the fact that slavery is gone, but they cling to free trade which was the twin corner stone of slavery on which rebellion raised its iniquitous and bloody debt giving structure.

The second couple that caught the eye of our artist are a modified type of the former on the tariff question. They have never gone down into the history of the country deep enough to learn that John C. Calhoun was the father of the theory of free trade and engrafted it on the Democratic party, which it has ridden ever since to the financial harm of the country every time a Democratic President came into power with a supporting Congress. They are representatives of the class that are trying to whoop down a protective tariff because they call it a tax on the men who buy goods when they have to pay a few cents more on the dollar than if the doors of the country were opened to all goods from Europe where they are manufactured by men who do not get half the wages American workmen get. They are representatives of a class that want to see American wages go down to the wages paid in the old country. They belong to the class of men that are telling the people of Mifflin county. Look see, Mifflin county people are nearly all farmers and a protective tariff is an outrageous tax on them. A free trade or revenue tariff would give them cheaper goods, but they don't tell that by taking the whole country, it is found that about 45 in every hundred people are connected with manufacturing establishments and that free trade or a tariff for revenue only would close most of the establishments and throw the workmen back to farming and thus would produce over production and in that way the markets for the Mifflin county farmer would be rendered profitless. That's the way Cleveland's tariff reduction will reach Mifflin and Juniata counties.

The third hurrying looking couple are after the spoils of office, and they are talking about the surplus not caring a continental so that they get some of it. They would like to be among the favored ones that Cleveland's Treasurer loaned $60,000,000 of the surplus to without interest. They don't stop to think that there is yet a thousand million of rebel debt to pay and that it will take quite a pile of surplus to pay it. They don't stop to think or care that if the surplus disappears the coming four years as it has under Cleveland that there will be no surplus and the government will have to borrow money as it did under Buchanan's administration.

The fourth couple are hitched on the Chinese question and foreign emigration question which has caused a certain class of Democratic speakers and writers to impress the minds of their hearers with the untruth that the Republican party is responsible for the flood of wild foreigners that have come to this country. The fact is the foreign element that is complained of is brought here by the business of this country, and by mining and contracting parties. He is an ignorant speaker or a designing speaker that presumes on the ignorance of his hearers that attempts to hold the Republican party responsible for the influx of foreigners.

The fifth couple are representatives of the free whisky party and it is reported that there was any amount of free whisky to be had for the asking last Saturday night. The men that made the bars free are the men that call the Republican party a free whiskey party because it advocates the repeal of the war tax on tobacco and whiskey just as the was tax or stamp tax on matches, promisory notes, deeds, and so forth have been repealed. The democracy want the tax on tobacco and whiskey to stand. They have taken it as a Democratic trust where they can put a lot of their office seekers. They prefer to break down the manufacturing establishments to breaking the whiskey trust by the repeal of the war tax on tobacco and whiskey.

The sixth couple are a couple of shouters for Jacobs for Senate. Juniata was worked for the meeting in a great measure for Jacobs. If he were not a candidate Lewistown would not have been honored by such a splendid white hatted delegation for he is the special pet at this time of some of the Democratic leaders in Juniata. He is a gusher for Cleveland and the old Roman and against the tariff tax as they are pleased to call it. He knows that the tariff must pay the expenses of government and the rebel debt, and when he denounces corporations he knows that corporations pay the great bulk of the expenses of this state. He and his friends are cautious right there, for some reason, and do not carry out their reasoning on the national tariff so as to apply it to corporations by calling the freight charged and the fare charged passengers, a tax. Thereby hangs a tale on which they don't gush. Mr. Jacobs seemes to be lame in his oratory on these kindred subjects of taxation by government and corporations, he is also very lame in the minds of a large class of people who believe that he will be Bourbon enough if he gets to the Senate to refuse to countenance the submitting of the question of the liquor amendments to the people for their approval or rejection by a popular vote.

The seventh scene is uncommonly unique for it represents a flirtation between a man on the line of march and a Lewistown woman who is looking with admiration on the hilarious Democracy.

The eight scene represents the brethren after the glory of the occasion has all passed, wondering solitary and alone homeward, foot sore and weary, ready to be put in their little bed.

The Newport News of last week says: A bucket of hot ashes, thrown on a pile of straw and manure, at Mr. George Weaver's stable, set fire to the inflammable material and when first discovered by Mr. John Thompson was blazing as high as your head. The fire was extinguished before making further headway, but in a very short time would have communicated with the stable and other outbuildings.

From the Newport Ledger of last week: Wednesday morning, Miss Sue R. Kistler, daughter of David Kistler, Esq., of Madison township, left Newport by rail on Wednesday for New York, where she will take passage on board the steamer Umbria on Saturday for Liverpool, thence she will go to London. She will leave England by the first vessel for Madras, India, then she travels inland several hundred miles to Guntur, where she has been assigned to Missionary duty. The Ledger wishes the young lady a pleasant voyage and safe arrival at her destination, and may she be the means of converting many heathen.

Joe Dull, of McVeytown, who is known by all hunters and fishermen as the veteran of them all in that section, was accidentally shot while out hunting on Tuesday. A gun loaded with buckshot in the hands of a companion was accidentally discharged, the contents striking him in a vital place near the groin. His recovery is doubtful—McVeytown Journal.

Clarence Edmonson, of Sinking Valley, Blair county, was accidently shot by his brother-in-law, Samuel Cooley, on Saturday last, while on their way home from hunting. Mr. Cooley saw a pine squirrel cross his path, and hurriedly bringing his gun to his shoulder fired, just as young Edmonson stepped in front of the muzzle. The shot, wadding and clothing entered his clothing, wounding him so severely as to cause his death on Monday. Deceased had not yet attained his 20th year—Huntingdon Journal.

About day light, last Thursday morning Mrs. Hackenberger, wife of store keeper Hackenberger was alarmed by the crack of a gun. From the cackling of the chickens, she thought some early prowler was helping himself to a fowl. She speedily aroused her husband who was taking a morning nap. Hackenberger was down stairs and out at the hen house "in a jiffy." The smoke of the sportsman's gun lay all around the chicken coop, but the man was nowhere in sight, but near by the game was flapping its wings in the agony of a fatal shot. Hackenberger took up the bird and at first could not determine what it was, but it turned out to be a plump full grown pheasant. What brought the fowl of the woods there at that early hour, and who shot it? are unanswered questions.

Because the Sentinel properly suggests the propriety of candidate Berry, preaching instead of scrambling for office the editor of the Tribune deems himself called upon to champion the cause of Mr. Berry, which no one will dispute his right to do, but he goes out of his way in doing so when he expresses a desire to know "who is the Sentinel trying to serve? Its flippant reference to 'the Lord' is only in keeping with its remarks and ideas about preachers, churches and religion." It is a queer question to ask since the spiritual service of the editor or the Sentinel does not enter into the campaign. The inquiry of the editor of the Tribune is the rank cant of a man who professes to just know who the devil is going to get and who the Lord is going to get. Quit your cant brother Garman, and understand there is no such thing as cheating the Lord. Possess your soul in peace, the Lord will get his own as you will find out on the Judgment Day. But to get back to things of earth and events of the present day, the question recurs to the election of a Register and Recorder. Republicans don't scratch the name of Anson B. Wills. Be certain to see to it that you are not tricked out of your vote for him. Examine your ticket. Some one might pass a ticket on you with his name off. Examine your ticket when about to vote.
