W. H. MCNITT, P. M.

Dec. 2, 1889.

Charles Sholler aged about 22 years, son of contractor Sholler of Williamsburg, Blair county, became a railroad brakeman a short time ago. On last Friday morning he was knocked down by the bumper of a freight car at Bellwood. The cars passed over both his arms. He was taken to the railroad hospital at Altoona where the left arm was amputated at the shoulder, and the right arm two inches below the elbow.

Lincoln Kauffman of Walker township had a fine horse to die several days ago. The horse was bought at the late horse sale. The beast was opened. His left lung was almost entirely wasted away and his right lung was diseased. Farmer Rowe, near this town had a horse to die not long since. The animal was opened and its lungs were diseased very much like those of the horse of Lincoln Kauffman.

In the matter of the view and so forth, of the Mifflintown Bridge, and exceptions, filed to the report of the viewers. The Court on Monday referred the report back to the viewers to view the river bridge after the rebuilding has been completed and to assess the damage, if any, which the company or corporation may sustain by the taking of the same for a county bridge, and make report to the next term of Court.

Cornelius Howard an Irish peddler, of 18 years standing is among his many friends in this county, selling linen table cloths, towels, &c., cheap. He is a typical Irishman, full of humour, wit and business. He is an accomplished Jews Harp player, and can sing a song as well as many a professional singer, and often after his patrons have purchased from his pack, he throws into the bargain a tune on the harp or entertains them with a song.

Robert Bastress of Roanoke, Virginia, was home among his friends several days ago. He told about how he and a friend were out in a field one evening when a dog started a rabbit. Bunny ran close by them. He took up a stick and hurled it at the rabbit. The little animal was struck and killed. His friend told a lot of colored folks who were present, "that is the way we catch rabbits in the north. We hunt them with clubs." The darkies said: "You Yankee folks am queer people."

When you are looking around for a local paper for the home circle, remember that the SENTINEL AND REPUBLICAN is the largest paper published in Juniata county, and in addition to all important personal and religious and business and political news gives a well selected assortment of literary reading, almost twice as much reading as any other paper published in the county. One dollar in advance. Those who desire the Weekly Press can secure it with the SENTINEL AND REPUBLICAN for one dollar and fifty cents in advance.

Sheriff Sales.

Sheriff Noble sold in the Court House last Friday to Howard J. Neely, 70 acres of land with a two-story frame house and frame stable in Monroe township as the property of Samuel Fisher, in hands of Wellington Smith, guardian for $20, and a tract of 20 acres of land with log house and foundery in Monroe township as the property of George Hockenbrought, administrator of John Deen, deceased and Catherine Deen to Francis ——— for $80.

Barn Burner in Jail.

Constable, John Taylor of Beale township created a sensation in town last Friday noon by bringing and lodging in jail, an Irishman of small stature, aged about 24 who the day before— November 28th — appeared before B. F. Crozier, a justice in Beale township, and confessed under oath to the burning of Henderson Forsha's barn in Tuscarora township, and the barn of Thomas Arbuckle in same township, last autumn. He gives the name of Nicklas Parel, and says he was bribed near Waterford to commit the act by a large man, who he met in the road in a buggy. The man in the buggy weighed about 200 pounds, had a dark moustach and a face pitted by small-pox. From him he received fifteen dollars and combustible material which to fire the buildings.

Fine Instruments on Fine Ships.

As to music the owners of the City of Paris, City of New York and Teutonic have shown the same consideration for the comfort of their passengers that they have in everything else. The two former ships are each provided with an upright piano by Mason & Hamlin, furnished in a superb case of cherry inlaid in bird's eye maple, the design harmonizing beautifully with the room itself These pianos contain the improved mode of stringing, patented by Mason & Hamlin, which is said to peculiarly fit them for withstanding the ravages of the sea. The Paris and New York are each provided with a two-manual pedal base organ, also by Mason & Hamlin furnished in an exquisitely chaste case of white enamel. The salon of the Teutonic contains a piano and also one of these marvelously beautiful and artistic instruments, viz, the Liszt organ, by Mason & Hamlin. The case of this instrument is truly a work of art. It is of old oak, highly polished, with trimmings in gold and dark brown, the total effect harmonizing beautifully with the architecture of the room. It is to be regretted that America can boast no such ships as these, but it is some comfort to the patriotic that the magnificent instruments on these ships are all of American make.—N. Y. Sun.

Booked for Court.

This is court week. The civil cases booked for trial are:

Jonathan E. Cree vs. Dwelling House Insurance Company of Boston. No. 33, Dec. T., 1888. It is a case from Beale township, and is to recover fire insurance money.

C. W. Ford vs. R. M. Ford, No. 5, April Term, 1889. A suit to recover inherited money that had been loaned to a grand-father.

A. J. Hass vs. T. J. Middah, No. 31, April term, 1889. A suit that grew out of a horse dieker.

William Cleck vs. Samuel Thomas, No 33, April Term 1889. This is an action for the recovery of damages for estranging the affections of plaintiff's wife.

R. L. Guss vs. William H. McDonald, owner, and Wilber F. McCahan, contractor, No. 39, April Term 1889. This is a case to recover on a mechanic's lien.

M. H. Varnes vs. John Bashor, No. 3, September Term, 1889. This is an action that had its origin in the June flood. Drift, rails, &c., lodged on lands of Varnes. Beashor claimed some of the rails, and entered upon the land of Varnes and hauled drift rails to his farm.

S. T. McCulloch vs. Jacob Wisehaupt, No. 124 Sep. Term, 1889. This suit is about a horse that Wisehaupt sold to McCulloch, who claims that the horse was not sound.

COMMONWEALTH.

Com. vs. Darwin Rhine, assault and battery. Prosecutor, Charles Sherlock. This seems to have been an effort on the part of the young men to prove which of the two is the best in a rough and tumble fight.

Com. vs. James D. Watts, fornication and bastardy. Prosecutor, Catherine Smeltz.

Com. vs. James Coder, assault and battery. This is trouble over the borrowing of a gun.

Com. vs. Thomas Yocum, Albert Yocum and Walter Yocum, assault and battery. Prosecutor, James Zimmerman. This trouble grew out of the stoning of a woman.

Com. vs. Charles Sherlock fornication and bastardy. Prosecutrix, Nancy A. Barton.

Com. vs. A. R. Berryman, assault and battery. Trouble about a gun.

Com. vs. A. R. Berryman, assault and threats. Prosecutor, James Coder, This is a trouble over the pointing of a gun at a daughter of James Coder.

Com. vs. D. W. Allan, Jr., assault and battery. Prosecutor, D. W. Allen, Sr. A quarrel between father and son.

Com. vs. A. R. Burd, single adultery and bastardy. Prosecutrix, Ellen Patton

Com. vs. Thomas J. Yocum, assault and battery. Prosecutor, James Zimmerman.

Com. vs. Nichlas Parel, arson. Prosecutor, Nichlas Parel. This is a case that was booked last Friday and will awaken an interest in every home in the county for the self confessed criminal claims to have burned two large barns in Tuscarora Valley. Last Thursday—Thanksgiving Day—he informed against himself before Squire B. F. Crozier of Beale township and charged that he burned the Forsha barn near Waterford, and the Arbuckle barn near McCoysville last September. He said he was given $15 by a large man to burn the barns. The same man gave him a cartridge with a long fuse. The fuse burned until it reached the cartridge when an explosion took place that fired the barns. The night before Arbuckle's barn was burned—two men—a short and a long one—were seen at the barn which so alarmed Arbuckle that he had the building watched all night. The next day about noon, fire broke out in the barn and destroyed it. The Forsha barn was burned about noon several days before the Arbuckle barn. No strange men were seen about it, but a short and long man were seen in the vicinity, and one night obtained permission to sleep in Mr. Harlan's barn. Mrs. Bruner who lives near Mexico claims to have seen two men the morning after the burning of Heterick's barn and they said something about more barns to be burnt, but whether the self confessed barn burner now in jail is one of the two men so frequently reported to have been seen last autumn does not yet appear.

In that old yard quiet and still,
On the north side of that beautiful hill,
Is a little grave neatly made,
In which my darling boy was laid.

I'll love to go to that quiet spot,
To think, of Roy, who is no'er forgot,
My darling boy, and his voice so clear,
That made him to my heart so dear.

I do not mourn him as lost or gone,
To the world of light he has flown I know.
He will wait for me to come,
Until my work on earth is done.

It seems to me he is nearer far,
And he has left those beautiful gates ajar,
On his way to the beautiful land of rest,
I'll see him when my soul is blest.

No tempest now can spoil my flower,
It will ever bloom in that heavenly bower,
Jesus will water and tend it well,
For in his book he so doth me tell.
