Carlisle—Herald. We learn that the two young women who are conducting the Salvation Army meetings in Cleversburg, this county, have been instrumental in making over a hundred conversions. The meetings are said to be the largest revivals ever held in the upper part of the county. It is said a prominent resident of the village has offered the Salvationists a sum of money if they will convert every married man and married woman in the vicinity. From present indications the two women are on a fair way to make the money.

In Clarion county a farmer let his hogs forage on his neighbor's farm, where the division fence was down. Suit was brought against the free pasture neighbor. The court awarded the damages, the case was carried up to the Supreme court and that body sustained the lower court. It would have been many times cheaper to have kept up the division fence, and by so doing have preserved the mutual respect between each other. As the case stands the act of the free pasturer is under the bane of the courts, and he is looked upon with contempt by his neighbors.

From the Lewistown Sentinel of the 13th.—The residence of Capt. T. J. Frow, on Chestnut street, was entered by burglars at an early hour this (Thursday) morning, the entrance being effected through a front window. The robbers, two men, were discovered when they went up stairs by Mrs. Frow's Aunt, who gave the alarm. Mrs. Frow called for help from the front window and the burglars took a sudden departure just as the Captain reached the top of the stairs. The robbers had helped themselves to some whiskey found away back in a closet, but missed a lot of silverware in a drawer of the sideboard where they did the drinking. Some silver spoons belonging to Miss Bessie Manu were taken.

The following accounts having been filed in the Register's office will be presented for confirmation and allowance before Court March 10, 1891.

The account of John W. Patterson, executor of John Varnes, late of Harford county, Maryland, of the assets of said estate in Pennsylvania.

The first and final account of Jeremiah Lyons, Esq., executors of John Q. Adams, late of Beale township, deceased.

The first and final account of John C. Partner, administrator of David Partner, late of Milford township, deceased.

The first and final account of Joseph Bell, administrator of Joseph G. Mathis, late of Lack township, deceased.

The account of Ralph E. Dobbs, executor of James Dobbs, late of Tuscarora township, deceased.

The second and final account of A. J. Ferguson, executor of Samuel Goshorn, late of Tuscarora township, deceased.

The first and final account of F. M. M. Pennell, Esq., administrator of John R. VanOrmer, late of Walker township, deceased.

Not knowing how easily it is to make typographical mistakes, and not considering how difficult it is to read the hand write of poets, it is no wonder he feels nervous, and blames the printer for intentionally changing the poem so as to make it appear ludicrous.

A Chicago poet lover sent a poem to a newspaper for publication. It was a love poem. The opening line read:

"I kissed her under the silent stars."

Imagine the lover's consternation, when he read it in the newspaper:

"I kicked her under the cellar stairs."

For oysters and ice cream go to the Lecture room of the Methodist church. The ladies will give a festival, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening of this week. Come and bring all your friends and have a good time.

The grip has infested Augusta, Ga. The whole town has succumbled to its inevitable influence. It is in the air, between the sheets, on the street—every where. Physicians have succumbed to it, and those who had it last year are taking their second round.—Ex.

General William T. Sherman died in New York City, at 10 minutes to two o'clock in the afternoon, last Saturday, of erysipelis and bronchial trouble contracted ten days previous. He was born at Lancaster, O., February 8, 1820. He received a Military training at West Point: after the Mexican war he became a banker: after that a lawyer: from the law he went to teaching in a military school, and from teaching he went into street railroad enterprises and was in that buisness when rebellion broke out. Rebellion made him famous.

The keeper of a saloon on Main street has a bull pup that is his pride, and his friends admire it. Recently one of them saw the pup being led down State street by a man who was not its owner. Resolved to rescue a prize of such value he rushed in and told the stranger who did own the dog, and that it must go back. After energetic language the friend took the pup back in triumph, carried him to the saloon and set him down on the floor to find the original pup there in full possession. Now he is advertising dog No. 2, but the owner does not appear.—Hartford Courant.

OUR HATS AND FURNISHING GOODS

Are worth coming for. They certainly are the greatest bargains ever offered in these lines. Reduced prices all along the line.

Saying that we have made Reductions in each and every garment does not fittingly express how cheaply we are selling off our stock. We literally give free not only the profits, but a large slice of the cost. This may appear incredible, but it is positively true and you will say so, too, when you visit us. Such low prices for fine clothing and furnishings have never been known in Juniata county, and every citizen should take advantage of it at once.
