HERALD & EXPOSITOR

CARLISLE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, May 7, 1845.

☞V. B. PALMER, Esq. No. 59 Pine street, Philadelphia, and 169 Nassau street, (Tribune Buildings) New York, and South-east corner of Baltimore and Calvert streets, Baltimore, is our authorized Agent for receiving advertisements and subscriptions to the "CARLISLE HERALD & EXPOSITOR," and collecting and receipting for the same.

☞The absence of the Editor must be taken as an excuse for any errors that may appear in to-day's paper.

☞We are requested to state that the Rev. Mr. Newlin, will preach a sermon on the "BIBLE," on Sabbath evening next at 7½ o'clock, in the First Presbyterian Church.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

In our humble opinion there is a "considerable quantity" of heart practical philosophy contained in the following piece of poetry. We understand it; and have learned the bitter lesson; and we copy it here that our youthful readers may receive instruction. It is better to shed water-tears in youth, than to have the heart weep tears of blood in after life.

But some persons will not understand either us or our philosophy; be it so. We have, however, done our duty—we have shadowed forth (faintly it may be) a truth for the sout—a truth for love—a truth for life—a truth for death—a truth for Eternity Let our readers apply it.

"What if, in that sublimer state
To which our souls shall once attain,
The things of Earth, and Time, and FATE,
Shall pass before our eyes again.
Shall we review our life's slow way,
Its wants and weariness beholding,
And by heaven's purer noon survey
What Earth's dim twilight now is folding?

O what a wondrous change will pass
O'er all that here hath seemed or been!
Darkly we see, as through a glass,
What then shall face to face be seen;
The nothingness of all we prized,
The falsehood of the love we sought,
The priceless truth of hearts despised,
The worth of all we valued not!

Perchance, it shall not then be seen
That this, our earthly path of tears,
So desolate a waste hath been
As to the mourner's eye appears.
When clearer light around us breaks,
Our eyes shall read their course below,
A dreary line of long mistakes,
Atoned by many a needless woe.

Our youth was passed in visions fair,
In lavishing the wealth of heart;
Our manhood had the harder care
Of watching all those dreams depart,
What was there left for sad old age,
Except in useless grief to rue
The errors of a pilgrimage
We could not, if we would renew!

Yet in ourselves the evil lay,
Poor, weak artificers of woe!
Our idols all were made of clay,
But 'twas our hand that framed them so.
We needed some diviner call,
To teach our hearts alike to shun
The lovely fault of trusting all,
The bitter sin of TRUSTING NONE.

Turn we then with vain disgust
From love betrayed and faith deceived,
Nor let our hearts forget to trust,
When they are wounded, wrung, and grieved.
Take home this lesson—it is such
As turns Life's darkness into light;
"WE CAN NEVER LOVE TOO MUCH,
IF WE WILL ONLY LOVE ARIGHT"

But we must fiddle a little on the belligerant string. Sit here goes for a little chat about a

War with Great Britain.

The declarations made in Parliament by the leaders of both the great parties, on the question of British title to Oregon, and the duty and determination of the crown to resist any thing like an attempt to take possession of the Territory by our Government, has led to a pretty general belief that war between the United States and Great Britain is inevitable. One thing, however, is perfectly clear—the two Governments are directly at issue on the question of title, and President Polk, on the one side, and Sir Robert Peel, on the other, have so defined the position and determination of their respective countries, as to leave but little hope of the continuance of peace, but by mutual concessions and retractions. President Polk avers that our title to Oregon is "clear and unquestionable," and that it will become his duty to "assert and maintain" this title "by all constitutional means". Sir Robert Peel, the British Premier, has met this declaration of President Polk by language quite as decided. "I feel it my imperative duty," said he in the parliament, "on the part of the British Government, to state, in language the most temperate, but at the same time most decided, that we consider we have rights respecting this territory of Oregon, which are clear and irresistible. We trust still to arrive at an amicable adjustment, but, having exhausted every effort to effect that settlement, if our rights shall be invaded, we are resolved—and we are prepared—to maintain them."

Thus, the two nations stand, with the pen in one hand and the sword in the other, and if negotiation fails, it is clear that war must begin. No one can more sincerely desire peace or deprecate war than we do; and for the interests and happiness of the human family, we trust and believe that the matters in dispute may yet be amicably adjusted. But we should not shut our eyes to the fact that a serious and protracted conflict with Great Britain is more than possible—and it is therefore the duty of every citizen to urge upon the Government the importance of preparation to meet the worst that may befall. Especially should our Navy be increased as rapidly as possible, our vessels of war put in the best possible condition for active service, our Atlantic cities secured against the dangers of a sudden attack; and means taken to cover our lakes with fleets at the shortest warning.

Where the preponderance of right is, in this question, seems to be a matter of dispute. We, however, have always been taught to believe that Oregon was ours by discovery, by settlement and by treaty. Great Britain claims the same; but should negotiation fail and war begin, whether we are right or wrong in whole or part, it will be clearly the duty of every citizen to support his Government, and to pour out his treasure and his blood to defend our soil and drive back any foe that may have the temerity to attack us.

It seems to be the general impression, however, that in case of war, our seaports would be entirely at the mercy of the British Navy, and that for some time at least we should be badly whipped. Let us give way to no such cowardly apprehensions. We have already had two wars with Great Britain, from which we emerged with glory; though by the last war we gained but little else. We are at this moment better prepared both on sea and land than we were in 1775 or in 1812—and we trust is our confidence in the valor and patriotism of our people, and the resources of our country, that if we were attacked by the combined powers of Europe, we should feel no apprehension of defeat or subjugation.

But we do not feel a very strong disposition to handle the "grey goose quill" to-day, so we will conclude our "table" with the following sonnet. It is pretty—and moreover, it "remembers us" of a golden dream that we fondly cherished in whilom years. But the poison of treachery fell upon that dream and it faded; and we stood upon its grave at midnight, and swore—NEVER MORE TO BE A SLAVE. But we would not recall the spirit of departed days. "Look not mournfully into the Past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the present. It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear, and with a manly heart."

"'Twas but a dream! and oh! what are they all,
All the fond visions hope's bright finger traces,
All the fond visions time's dark wing effaces,
But very dreams! but morning buds, that fall
Withered and blighted, long before the night
Strewing the paths they should have made more bright,
With mournful wreaths, whose light hath past away,
That can return to life and beauty NEVER,
And yet, of whom it was but yesterday,
We deemed they'd bloom as fresh and fair forever.
Oh then, when hopes, that to thy heart are dearest,
Over the future shed their sunniest beam,
When round thy path their bright wings hover nearest,
Trust not too fondly! for 'tis but a DREAM.

☞We have been requested by a friend to give place to the following brief communication.

"The person who 'barbarously' altered an article and had it published in the last 'Saturday Courier,' without either the knowledge or consent of the author, will please accept the thanks of "E."

The act complained of above by our friend may have been intended as a kindness; but, in our opinion, common sense, as well as common decency, should teach people to refrain from meddling with affairs that cannot possibly concern them.

Agricultural Society Meeting.

The Society will meet in Education Hall, Carlisle, on Saturday the 17th May, at 10 o'clock, P. M., in pursuance of the provisions of the Constitution. RICHARD PARKER, Rec. Sec'y.

The members of the Society will not deem it intrusive if their special attention be called to the importance of our spring meeting. It is the time where arrangements are to be made for the business of the whole year; and unless all the members take such an interest in the affairs of the society as will exhibit their willingness to promote its usefulness, the exertions of the few must fail. At this meeting, too, communications are made by the officers of the Society which embody much useful knowledge of the art of farming; and no one whose employment is agricultural, is either too old or too young to gather something which he may turn to a profitable account. It is anticipated that at our next fall meeting, there will be great competition at the ploughing match and exhibition; and that it requires a previous membership of some months to entitle any one to become a competitor for the premium. It is desirable that every farmer and every farmer's son should become a member of the society, and all are earnestly invited to attend the approaching meeting.

POPULAR LECTURES,

On Various Subjects in the Physical Science, delivered in the chief cities and Towns in the United States,

By DIONYSIUS LARDNER,

Doctor of Civil Law, Fellow of the Royal Societies of London, and Edinburg, Member of the Universities of Cambridge and Dublin, and formerly Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in the University of London, &c., &c.

THE Publishers announce that DR. LARDNER having closed his professional tour as a public lecturer in this country, they have availed themselves of the opportunity of inducing him to prepare for publication a complete and authentic edition of his popular Lectures on Science. The general interest which these discourses have excited for the last four years throughout the Union, manifested by the continued assemblage of audiences of unprecedented numbers and respectability, in every part of the country from Boston to New Orleans, and from New York to St. Louis, afford the publishers good grounds for the assurance that they will thus present to the American Public an acceptable offering and a most useful manual of general information. They will also afford that large class of persons who have attended these courses an agreeable means of reviewing the impressions from which they have derived already so much pleasure and profit.

The following is a list of subjects which will be embraced in these Lectures:

The Solar System; The Theory of Gravitation; The Moon, (two lectures;) The Sun; The Planets; The Plurality of Worlds; The Comets, (two lectures; The Existence and Attributes of God Deduced from the Laws of Nature; Popular Fallacies: Light; Sound; Heat; Electricity, (two lectures; The Power of Steam; The Steam Engine; The Present State and Prospects of Steam Navigation in the United States and Great Britain; Railways; Galvanism, (two lectures;) The Stellar Universe; Combustion and Artificial Illumination; The Atmosphere, &c., &c., &c.; Magnetic Telegraphs; The Alliance of Science and Art, &c., Cc., &c.

No expense will be spared to render this work useful and attractive. Wood engravings illustrating the text will be copiously supplied. The work will be printed on new type, in the octavo form, and will be published in parts or numbers, at twenty-five cents each, and will be completed in about ten or twelve numbers. The first number will appear about the 1st of May next. Agents

USEFUL WORKS FOR THE PEOPLE.

THE Publishers having lost their entire stock—Books, Plates and Engravings—of their Series of "Useful Books for the People," by a late calamitous fire, have commenced the publication of a new Series, the first in order of which is the work on astronomy by ARAGO and LARDNER. Probably no work has ever appeared on the sublime science of astronomy, combining the same amount of accurate scientific information, with so much that is pleasing and entertaining to all classes of readers.

It is designed to follow up this publication by others of a like useful and interesting character, and although each one in this new series will be complete in itself, and entirely independent of each other, yet they will all be printed on the same sized page, in order that the series may be bound up together. The uniform price of each will be 25 cents.

HARRISBURG, PA.

THE undersigned respectfully announces to his friends and the friends of the Temperance cause in general, that he has taken that large and well known stand as the

THE SHAKSPEARE HOUSE,

in Locust street, near Third, opposite the Methodist Church, formerly kept as a Tavern by Mr. Charles Gleim, dec'd and more recently by Mr. M. Fichthorn, which shall be kept in the best manner as a House of Entertainment for all those who may favor him with their patronage. His Table will be plentifully furnished with all the varieties of the season; his Beds and every thing connected with the Establishment shall not be excelled by any liquor selling Tavern in the borough.

He can assure the friends of Temperance and all others that no pains will be spared to minister to the comforts of his guests, during their stay with him. He therefore respectfully solicits a share of public patronage.

JACOB F. MARKLEY.

New Hope Woolen Factory,

In Hampden Cumberland County.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public in general, that he has purchased that well known establishment, for the manufacture of cloth and carding of wool, situated in Hampden township, Cumberland county, on the Conodoguinet creek, about two miles north west of Kreiter's, and opposite the grist mill of Alexander S. Penrose, and lately owned by Reeser and Bowers, where he will be happy to accommodate all those who may favor him with their custom. From his long experience in the business, and the reputation already established at this factory, he flatters himself that his factory will meet the approbation and enlist the custom of the community at large.

Work will be taken in at the following places and duly attended to. At the Store of Mr. Parmley, in Mechanicsburg; at the Tavern of Jacob Kenninger in Woomelsdorf; at the Store of Messrs. J. & S. Coyle in Hogunstown; and at the Store of John H. Zearing in Sporting Hill.

As an inducement for payment in Cash he will make a reduction on Satinet of 10 per cent. and on Cloth of 5 per cent., if the cash is paid at the time of delivery.

THOMAS LINDSAY.

FARMERS' HOTEL.

THE subscriber takes this method of informing his friends and the public in general, that he has taken that well known tavern stand, in East Main street, a few doors from the Public Square Carlisle, lately occupied by Mr. Wm. Brown, (and long known as Wunderlich's stand,) where he is fully prepared to accommodate, in the best manner, all who may favor him with their custom.

His TABLE will be always supplied with the best the markets can afford—his BAR with the choicest liquors—and his bed rooms, &c., will be arranged with care. BOARDERS will be taken by the week, month or year.

His Stabling is ample, and a careful Ostler will always be in attendance. Drovers would do well to give him a call.

He hopes by strict attention to business and an anxious desire to please, as well as by moderate charges, to merit and receive a share of public patronage.
