A Swindle Exposed.

An advertisement of the "Denver Land Company" has been published in hundreds of newspapers throughout the country, and among others, some in this and adjoining counties. This so-called "Company," offered to sell lots in North Denver, Col., at fawas so large that a man's hat would bulously low prices. It now turns out that the whole affair is a swindle of the most outrageous character, and the "Company," consisting of Sidney A. Grantand A. F. Wilson, were arrested in Denver, last Saturday. The fraud was exposed by the Denver paper. hundreds of letters addressed to Grant and the Company have passed through the mails, and it is probably that many unwary persons have been drawn into the scheme. If there are any in this county who have entertained an idea of investing in these lots, this exposure will be welcome news,

A Wonderful Escape.

[Wilkesbarre Times.] An event occurred at the Stanton shaft at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon, of such an extraordinary character as to be well nigh incredible. Had we not seen and talked with the man himself, we could hardly have belived the story. It is briefly, this:

In a second of time it struck the carriage dashing it off the slides, and driving it through the wooden partition which passes down the centre of the shaft. Here the Brandy Camp bridge every Sunday the centre of the shaft. Here the in full force the Constitutional Amend to be a heavy truck, weighing 1600 or some means this had been permitted to run too far, and fell over.

McMahon was buried under broken wheels, splintered wood and rubbish and was half stunned by the crash and the shock. He thought at first he was fatally injured, but on crawling out from the debris, found that he had escaped with some cuts on his face and head, bruises on his body, and one arm and hand temporarily paraloized. Men cut through a brattice with axes, and took him from his perilous position. Here another difficulty confronted him-he was six hundred feet from the top, which he had to reach by means of ladders, and with but one arm and hand to use. He accomplished the feat by holding with his chin on the rungs, when reaching up

McMahon's escape from death is the most marvelous we have ever heard of about a mine, and he may safely claim to have had an experience no one has ever known, or in all probability ever will know.

Just how much impression the sermon made upon his mind is not clear, but he was captured with the vocal efforts of the Jubilee Singers, and as he came out of the church he whispered confidentially to a friend: "If they'll just hire a minstrel troupe by the year, they can count on me as a member and I'll do as much toward supporting the church as any d-d man in the country.
