[For the Agitator.]

Gone, but Missed.

Two flowers of one of our little churches have gone—the praise and admiration of every mouth, those two real characters of Christian beauty, in honor with all, in affection with all. What a blessing was their life. What a good, what an edification, what a charm, what a sanctification, what a jewel, is their death to us, what a welcome they have received above among the redeemed and angels. Yes, two flowers of one of our little churches, two flowers of our community, one from one, and another from another of two of our most estimable families, have gone.

What a contrast there is between the lives of some people. There is with some a life that comes to be followed with little less than an animal death. Sickening is the sight and painful to the feelings, of that of young men loitering about the bar-room, with countenances bearing the marks of sensuality rather than of intelligence. Unhappy also is the sight and unpleasant to the moral feelings of that young woman whose only relish is that of the ball-room, and who give scarcely any thing else for one to see about them but vanity and the love of frivolous pleasure.

But how noble, how salutary, how enriching to the feelings, what a joy, is the sight of one whose aim of life is to be useful and christian, like David's, to "serve his own generation according to the will of God."

Those who live with such an aim are the ones who come to be missed. Some, when they die are carried to the burying-ground and that is about all that is left of them to the world they are so carnal. In the persons referred to we have these, the people are greatly missed. There is not merely a family loss, a church loss, but a general loss. They are missed. Not only so feels the relative, but the neighbor and the towns-people.

There was once a young man given to vice and dissipaton. He was in the habit of going to the house of feasting. "O gather up my influence," says he in the liquor of dying, "and bury it with me." But here are those whose influence need not be buried, but it may well be allowed to go abroad. This of a character to prove a blessing. Though dead they yet speak for good.

Lieut. Levi R. Robb, died on the 9th of April, the tenth anniversary day of his uniting with the church. "Prepare to meet me in peace," were among the last words sent home to friends in a letter written upon the knee of a fellow-soldier immediately after receiving the fatal wound and found stained with the blood of his wound in the cause of his country and liberty, on its recahing them. "Keep up good cheer, my young frieed," said the beloved President Lincoln on coming to his bedside when visiting in the hospital at City Point, the sick and wounded soldiers of the 45th regiment. "I am trying to," he replied, looking up from his sinking condition, and these, perhaps were the dying words of the heroic and noble young man.

About six months after this, on the 27th of Oct. dies Mrs. Emily Jane Blanchard. They both loved one another in the fraternity of the christian faith, even as we all loved the one and the other. In the midst of the sufferings of the dying bed she showed the christian. Beckoning with her hand once or twice, while praying, she said "come Lord, come now." She told the doctor she was just stepping into Heaven, had it not been for something he gave her to revive her up and prevent her sinking. There was a like pleasantness of spirit with her through all her sickness as when in health.

There is no loss like that of a wife in the relations of life. In her is the loss of one of the nearest and dearest, and the mother of our children, a sort of double loss, some that more than single, a loss that touches to the quick, and makes itself most especially to be felt, and so the more should we be taught of God under it. I have sometimes thought I could hardly bear to leave my little children, but how can I bear to have those children left without a mother, a christian mother, and so I have felt more like praying, let me die first.

She left four young children. The next morning after her death and before they had got up, they were heard talking about their mother being in Heaven and how the angels had come and taken up her spirit there. Blessed is it for children to have a mother of whom they can talk in this sweet way after she is gone.—Would that every child had as good a mother, and every husband as good a wife.

May the Lord sanctify the influence of those deaths to the bereaved families and to this community.

May the minister's little daughter who was baptized the Sabbath previous to the death of the Christian woman alluded to, wit the name of Emma Blanchard, be an honor to her namesake, and prove no less a blessing in the relations of life. Franc. Rand.

PHYSICIANS AND OTHERS

PLEASE NOTICE.

I make no secret of ingredients. Helmbold's Extract Buchu is composed of Buchu, Cubebs, and Juniper Berries, selected with great care, prepared in vacuo and according to rules of PHARMACY AND CHEMISTRY.

These ingredients are known as the most valuable Diuretics afforded.

A DIURETIC

Is that which acts upon the kidneys.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

ACTS GENTLY,

Is pleasant in taste and odor, free from all injurious properties, and immediate in its action.

FOR THE SATISFACTION OF ALL,

See Medical Properties contained in Dispensatory of the U. S., of which the following is a correct copy:

"Buchu.—Its odor is strong, diffusive, and somewhat aromatic, its taste bitterish, and analogous to that of mint. It is given chiefly in complaints of the Urinary Organs, such as Gravel, Chronic Catarrh of the bladder, Morbid Irritation of the Bladder and Urethra, Diseases of the Prostrate, and Retention or the Incontinence of Urine, from a loss of tone in the parts concerned in its evacuation. It has also been recommended in Dyspepsia, Chronic Rheumatism, Cutaneous Affections, and Dropsy."

MANUFACTURING CHEMIST

IN THE WORLD.

I am acquainted with H. T. Helmbold; he occupied the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where others had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise.

[From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, March 10.]

We are gratified to hear of the continued success, in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmbold, Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 28 feet front, 230 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his Office and Labratory in this city, which are also model establishments of their class.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are

GENUINE PREPARATIONS,

And, knowing that the intelligent refrain from using any thing pertaining to Quackery, or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self-styled Doctors, who are too ignorant to read a physician's simplest prescription, much less competent to prepare pharmaceutical preparations.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Health is most important; and the afflicted should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, or until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.
