Mining Machinery, &c.

TO COAL OPERATORS, MINERS AND FURNACES,

GRICE & LONG, Locomotive Builders,

1340 BEACH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

Would call your attention to their Colliery and Furnace Locomotives designed for inside or outside work, and for any required guage of road and sharpest curves, with capacity to draw from 20 to 50 tons gross load.

Having developed in both the Anthracite and Bituminous regions of Pennsylvania, the most successful Tunnel Locomotive in the country, they offer with confidence their various styles of Locomotive Engines with every guarantee of their workmanship and performance, and refer to the many now in operation in the several mining districts, furnaces and forges in the State and country.

Their small, first cost, great power developed, together with their durability, great economy and light daily expenses over animal power or ordinary locomotive use, (as proven by their experience of several years) make a vast saving in expenses sufficient to pay their first cost in a very short time.

ROOT'S IMPROVED TRUNK ENGINES,

Stationary, Portable and Hoisting,

Double Piston Square Hoisting Engines, Hoisting Machinery for Coal Shafts, Sloping, Grist Mills, Stores, &c., &c.

One of these Hoisters can be seen running daily at HILL & HARRIS' Colliery, Mahanoy City, Pa.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION IS INVITED TO the Hoister, which has no equal. No dead points—having two pistons in one cylinder, either end of which is taking full steam when the other is passing centre. It requires no friction straps, clutches or brakes of any kind. Started, reversed or stopped instantly, and at any point of revolution, by the simple movement of a single lever. Having no keys, gibs, set screws, or other adjustable parts, which in other hoisters require the knowledge and constant care of an experienced engineer, can be put in the hands of the most inexperienced persons. All its working parts are enclosed in the case or cylinder, and are thus protected from breakage, the effects of dust, dirt, and rust or weather. Its extreme lightness, compactness and rapid speed, highly commend it for this use. Orders received for the manufacturer by the undersigned, who will also furnish descriptive catalogues, price lists, drawings, estimates, and other information.

UNION HAMS.

In offering the above brand to the attention of consumers the present season, we beg leave to state, that we have made very great improvements in their curing during the past Winter, and have no hesitancy in saying, they are the best Hams extant. They are selected from nicely corn fed Hogs, trimmed very nicely so as to make as little waste in cutting as possible, and the ingredients used in curing are the very finest to be had. The Hams are all assorted before pickling, and each size cured by itself to cure and not be too salt a great fault with most Hams. We also cure in Ice Houses all summer and can furnish the Hams at all times cut from Hogs that were alive within 6 weeks of the time the Hams are delivered which is a great advantage and one possessed by very few dealers. We feel satisfied a trial will insure satisfaction. None genuine unless branded. Sold only by

SOLITAIRE.

HOUR after hour
I measure these ribs of weary land,
And count the wind cut ruffles in the sand,
With sparkling strips of sun and strips of shade,
I see the aloe bud and bloom and fade;
I mark the dissolution of the flower,
Hour after hour.

Bright is the morning sun and fierce the noon;
The pulseless air cleaves to me in a swoon;
The low voiced waterfall, with muffled note,
The hoarse sea growling from some cavern throat,
Are all my answers while I watch and pray,
Day after day.

Year after year
I feel my coffin-lid sight begin to fall,
With vainly searching for a phantom sail;
Entombed within my crystal wall of sea,
No tender human footstep quickens me;
No sweet and homely human forms appear,
Year after year.

FROM THE N. Y. SUN.

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE H. THOMAS.

[A PRIVATE LETTER COMMUNICATED TO THE SUN.]

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Feb. 21, 1870.

MY DEAR * * * * : I had the pleasure to receive your letter of the 12th this morning.

I have notified the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Tennessee Legislature, that I will return the gold medal to the Legislature of Tennessee as soon as I can get to New York city, where it now is on deposit for safe keeping.

In reply to this notification, the Speaker wrote me protesting against my returning the medal, and tried to explain away my apparent attempt to insult me by the resolution offered in the Legislature, &c.

I know the Tennessee character so well that I place no value whatever on the Legislature's attempted explanation, but I cannot now get the medal. It seems I shall wait until I have an opportunity to impack the box, when I shall return it to the Legislature.

I agree with you entirely in your expression of disgust at the manner in which the situation and condition of the army under my command for the defence of Tennessee in the fall of 1864 was persistently ignored by parties trying to justify themselves for the course taken by them in regard to the operations of that army. But feeling confident that the country will fully understand the condition of the army left with me, and as fully justify me in all that I did to delay battle until my troops were in condition to strike an effective blow, when the history of the Tennessee campaign is written, I have not allowed myself to be drawn into the present controversy.

Chaplain Van Horn is now engaged writing the history of the Army of the Cumberland, and I have no doubt will clearly and satisfactorily detail all the circumstances connected with the defence of Tennessee against Hood's invasion. In connection therewith he will also give a history of the operations of the army after the battle of Nashville.

Any information or suggestions you may feel disposed to communicate to him he will be most happy to receive, and it is his desire and mine that the history of the Army of the Cumberland shall be as complete and reliable as possible. His address is, Rev. Thos. B. Van Horn, Racine, Wis.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) GEO. H. THOMAS.

Gen. * * * *, U. S. Army.

We are glad to learn, as we do from the above letter, that a full history of the Army of the Cumberland is being written, and by one so competent to do the work as is our late brother officer and old friend Chaplain Van Horn, particularly that eventful and grand campaign before Nashville in 1864. That any one would be base enough to attempt to detract from the honors added at that time to Maj. Gen. Thomas' already great name, we wondered, but were not surprised at its most signal failure. Facts are stubborn things, and bolstering up a third-rate officer when so many others so vastly his superior in point of capacity and efficiency, yielded the justly earned laurels to their Commander-in-Chief, could have no other issue. Perhaps it was thought that Gen. Thomas' native modesty, as in times past, and deference, by those who were with him, to his wishes, would permit the would-be-hero to temporarily, at least, enjoy coveted honors, even though they were not earned. The attempt was made, but the answer was overwhelming. And now, that the grand old hero has gone to his rest—we may be permitted to note very briefly some facts as they came under our own observation, during that eventful and perilous hour of the war. Those who remember the long and fatiguing Atlanta campaign, of four months' duration—every day of which may be said to have been the record of a battle—will readily call to mind, that after a short rest, Gen. Thomas left Atlanta to provide for the defence of the now newly added 140 miles of railway communication, while the main army was in and about Atlanta; particularly as the road was being threatened and raids upon it committed by the rebel cavalry. While on this duty, he found it necessary to go as far as Nashville, and his arrival being communicated to the War Office, Mr. Stanton immediately telegraphed the General that his presence there relieved the authorities of great anxiety. Gen. Sherman having decided to make his famous "March to the Sea," showed his entire confidence in Gen. Thomas by leaving him to solve the great questions that must necessarily arise, and to map out and carry out for himself, an entirely new campaign. To return; in the Army of the Mississippi that made the march to Atlanta, under General Sherman, there were the Army of the Cumberland, 3 corps, under Maj. Gen. Thomas, the Army of the Tennessee, 2 corps under Maj. Gen. McPherson, and the 23d Army corps, a small corps under Gen. Schofield.—Of this force, after Atlanta was captured, Gen. Sherman took with him the two strongest corps of the Army of the Cumberland, the 14th and 20th, and the Army of the Tennessee entire, with the engineers, cavalry, &c. This left to be returned to General Thomas, the Fourth Corps under Major-General D. S. Stanley, and the 23d corps under Gen. Schofield. These troops came under General Thomas' orders after Hood had commenced his march towards the Tennessee River and Nashville. Previous to that particular time there was but a very limited force of cavalry with the troops at the established posts along the river to contest its passage by the enemy. The providentially rainy season hindered their crossing, but when it was made against all the opposition that could be brought to bear, an obstinate withdrawal of the troops towards Nashville was begun, under the orders of General Thomas, who was in direct telegraphic communication with his subordinates, waiting anxiously the while for the arrival of Major Gen. A. J. Smith's corps from Missouri, then ordered to report to Gen. Thomas. These troops did not reach Nashville, however, until the day after the battle at Franklin, Dec. 1st, 1864, thirty-one days from the time of their being promised. Gen. Schofield being the ranking officer with the troops, orders were sent to him in the front, but every movement came directly under Gen. Thomas' eye, and was the result of anxious study and watching. Early and late was he overlooking the ground, and every possible move of the enemy engaged his most earnest consideration. The battle at Franklin was a sudden and fierce attack upon our hastily and not wisely taken position, but Gen. Schofield being on the ground and forced to battle, made his own arrangements, and then retired to the Fort on the north side of the Harpeth River, to await the result. The severe loss of the rebels in general officers and men killed on the plain in front of the earthworks, shows how stubbornly they fought. By a break in that part of the line held by the 23d corps, Gen. Schofield's own command, a large body of the rebels found entrance, but the desperate fighting of Gen. Opdyke's brigade, with their gallant commander at its head, soon closed the gap, restored the line, and made those who came in prisoners. Gen. D. S. Stanley, commanding the fourth corps, was severely wounded in this engagement by a rifle ball, which cutting deeply into the back of his neck, disabled him from further service with his corps for a long time.

This is the battle where Gen Schofield's great generalship exh
