MARRIACE ON $12 A WEEK.

There has been considerable discussion in the Philadelphia North American on the question whether a young man whose income does not exceed $12 a week should marry. There seems to be a preponderance of doubt whether two persons can live on $12 a week and be happy. In the discussion, women who had daughters of a marriageable age and aspiring daughters themselves took the ground that a young man having an income of $12 a week should assume marital relations. This is sufficient, they argue, to assure connubial bliss. The young men themselves seem to look at the matter through different colored glasses.

To the people of Snyder county, no doubt, the discussion would be more nearly one-sided owing to the fact that most of the young men and in fact nearly all of them jump into the matrimonial harness on a much less income than $12 per week. Whether bliss always follows we have no means of knowing, but as there are on an average only four or five divorces a year granted by the courts, we presume there is as much happiness on an income of less than $12 a week than there is on one of larger proportions. The truth of the matter is that happiness does not depend so much on an income that will permit of luxuries as it does upon other things that enter into the make up of manhood and womanhood and above all among the poorer classes the disposition to so regulate the expenditures to conform to the amount of the income.

A man with $5 a week can not live at the rate of $10 a week. He will soon come to grief. An income beyond the actual necessities of life is not a guarantee to marital happiness. In fact unlimited means will not assure any man and wife the undisputed possession of each other's confidence and esteem nor the mutual bliss of the pair.

If no one in Snyder County would marry until their income reached $12 a week, it would soon be depopulated. What is needed most among our people is to be sure the income will provide the necessities and know how to use the income successfully to that end.
