PRR Plans Repair Work On Bridge At Gallitzin

The Chestnut Street overpass of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Gallitzin will be widened and repaired this summer. The bridge carries traffic over the eastbound tracks near the tunnel entrance.

There will be no change as far as the roadway is concerned. The grade will remain the same.

The railroad plans to widen the south side of the bridge over its roadbed and to raise and repair the wingwalls. The work will be done by Pittsburgh Division forces of the PRR.
