Another Warning, Will It Pass Unheeded.

The recent fire in our neighboring town, Smithport, reminds us again of the risk that our citizens are taking in not providing some means of combating the element which, "is a good servant under control but a destructive master." It is universally admitted that if a fire begins in the business portion of our Borough it would in all probability make a clean sweep. Is it not wisdom to take the matter in hand in time? The expense for a complete set of apparatus would more than be defrayed in the reduced rates that would be made for insurance, and the loss by a conflagration would pay for several. Why don't some of our energetic young men organize a Hose, Engine, and Ladder Company. Where's the leader to inaugurate the movement?

After an illness of less than a week, and despite the almost superhuman efforts of willing hands and loving hearts, little Pearl, the beautiful, sweet, and pure pearl, was transposed from the garden of time to the elysian fields in the glories of paradise. All who knew the child loved her, and in her death the sorrowing friends have the sympathy of the community.

M'MACKIN.—At Centerville, Pa., Saturday, May 13, 1882, Mrs. Mary, wife of John M'Mackin, age 30 years, 9 months and 12 days.

In her death her husband loses a faithful wife, and her three children, the youngest a boy of two weeks, a kind and affectionate mother. The burial was at the Catholic cemetery and the funeral was a very large one.

A Card. MR. EDITOR.—Permit us through the columns of your paper to express publicly our thanks to the good people of Wilcox, who completely surprised us last Friday evening by unceremoniously entering our house, for the very purpose of pounding the Minister and his wife, which at once they proceeded to do, and seemed heartily to enjoy the same, such pounding, however, as they gave leaves no sores. But, to be more explicit, we were amazed as between eighty and ninety gentlemen, ladies and children, came in a body to visit us, bringing with them substantial evidences of their esteem in the shape of groceries and dry goods. After permitting us to enjoy their society for an hour, they left us to calmly survey and explore the pyramid of treasure they had formed on the dining room table. Our estimation of the value of these gifts is not measured by their money value, considerable though it was. We appreciate the good will which prompted this surprise, and the heartiness with which it was entered into and hope we may prove worthy of the esteem thus expressed.

MR. and MRS. T. S. NEGLEY.

The Railroad Situation. A COMPROMISE EFFECTED BY THE ROCHESTER & PITTSBURG AND NEW YORK, LAKE ERIE & WESTERN. (Elk Democrat.)

At last we are able to announce to our readers that the differences which have for nearly a year existed between the Rochester & Pittsburg and New York, Lake Erie & Western railroad companies have been amicably arranged, and that the prospects of the building of both roads the coming summer and fall are very bright. The terms of the compromise had been arranged a week or two ago, but were not signed until Saturday last. They are substantially as follows:

The New York, Lake Erie and Western relinquished all claim to the right of way on the west side of the Clarion between Ridgway and Johnsonburg, and will run over the Philadelphia and Erie track at Ridgway in the neighborhood of the Eagle Valley tannery, it will probably cross Main street near the east end of the Clarion bridge, and skirting the foot of the hill on the south side of the river, will strike the line of the Rochester and Pittsburg at Hall's farm, opposite Grant & Horton tannery, and will continue on the east side of the Clarion to the mouth of Toby, which it will ascend on the east side to within about two miles of Brookwayville, where it will cross to the west side.

The Rochester and Pittsburg will run on the west side of the Clarion from Johnsonburg to a place called "Devil's Elbow," about six miles below Ridgway, where it will cross the Clarion and run alongside the New York, Lake Erie and Western to the mouth of Toby, where it will cross to the west side of Toby and continue on that side to Brookwayville. It will be seen that, as an offset to the concession granted by the New York, Lake Erie and Western between Johnsonburg and Ridgway, the Rochester & Pittsburg surrenders its line from Ridgway to the mouth of Toby, taking the other (west) side of the river between those points, the New York, Lake Erie and Western reimbursing them for the grading on the east side, which is nearly completed.

This information coming to us from a high official of the Rochester and Pittsburg, can be relied upon as a true statement of the adjustment of the long-standing differences between the two companies.

The Coming Great Show. With what impudence, reader, boy or professor or printer, banker or baker, tutor or tailor, doctor or druggist, merchant or miller, farmer or freedman, dentist or devil—printer's devil we mean—benefit or bachelor, old maid or matron, old or young, short or tall, or any body at all, must you now be waiting for the coming to Ridgway, Pa., on May 25, 1882, of Hilliard's great show. On that memorable day let "laughter merrily" come and be provoked to laugh, let the learned come and learn, the grave not ungrateful, and the wise and good forbear commending it. We swear not a jot from the truth, asserting it the culmination of all that curiosity could wish, or fancy picture; all that the most critical could ask or sanguine anticipate; what morality indorses and religion allows; what the scholar can consider with advantage, and the unlearned study with great profit; what the children adore and adults applaud; what brightens the eye of age and adds lustre to the ingenious countenance of youth; what dispels the shadows of sadness and adds glee to the laugh of gladness; what effaces the crow's feet of care and for a time makes all forget the stern realities of life and live at least a few bright hours in fancy's realm. Come and see the wonders of zoology, the elephants, the towering camels, the ferocious tigers, the lordly lions, the mammoth aviary, the fearless gymnasts of mid-air, the little leapers, the funny fools, and innumerable other wonders, the most entertaining and delightful ever presented under canvass.

A few days ago a young Editor attended a Concert given by the young Ladies of a certain Town and the gallant young Editor wrote it up in splendid shape, the same day he had visited a herd of Short-horn cattle owned by a farmer in the vicinity, and he wrote up the cattle, also. The Cross-eyed Foreman of the office got the two articles mixed up as follows: The concert given last evening by sixteen of the most beautiful and interesting young Ladies of our Town was highly appreciated, they were elegantly dressed in lace bunting purchased at the Grand Central (P. & K's.) and sang in a most charming manner, winning the plaudits of the entire audience, who pronounced them the finest lot of Short-horns in the County. A few of them are of rich brown color, but the majority are spotted, brown and white. Several of the heifers were fine-bodied, tight-limbed animals and promise to prove good property. That Warner corset at 50 cents sold at the Grand Central is warranted to outwear any other corset in the market for the same price.

Remarkable for overcoming disease caused by impure water, decaying vegetation, etc., is Brown's Iron Bitters.

Much better do without sugar and coffee than to be out of Peruna.

The Third Ticket. CHAIRMAN GARRETT GIVES HIS VIEW SQUARELY ON THE SUBJECT. (Philadelphia Press.)

Philip C. Garrett, Chairman of the Committee of One Hundred, who is named as the probable nominee for Governor by the Independent Convention of May 24, gave his opinion yesterday of the result of the Harrisburg Convention, and of his own possible nomination. His opinion of the regular ticket was pronounced and emphatic. Of his own nomination he was not inclined to speak, save to give reasons why he thought he would not be the strongest candidate to lead the Independent revolt. Such a revolt he seemed to think certain, not against General Beaver personally, but against his nomination in obedience to the dictation of Senator Cameron.

Mr. Garrett was found at his estate, "Fairfield," on Fisher's Lane, Germantown. When asked to express himself upon Wharton Barker's opinion, published in yesterday's Press, that he would be made the head of a third ticket, Mr. Garrett settled his square form and gazed thoughtfully through a window across the wet lawn. "I think Mr. Barker is mistaken," he said, "in saying that the Committee of One Hundred would favor my nomination. Our position as a Committee is altogether what we wished to keep free from suspicion of personal motives. We have no such motives, and our influence upon municipal affairs depend upon our not being even suspected of them. On that very account we made it a condition of membership that no one of the Committee should hold important office, and that upon being elected to such an office any member should at once resign. It is not, therefore, the intention of the Committee, especially of leading members, to take important office. For this and no other reasons, I must say frankly that it would be a mistake to nominate me."

"What are the other reasons?" Mr. Garrett was asked.

"I believe in success, and I don't believe in half way measures," he replied. "I should suppose that the Independents had better either be satisfied with the nomination of General Beaver, or else endeavor to unite all the element of opposition against him, if their conviction of his unfitness for the nomination is sufficiently strong."

"You do not think, then, that your name would unite all the forces of opposition?"

"It certainly would not call the Democrats to the support of the Independent ticket. I do think, however, that an Independent nomination might be successful. But one should try to put any principles he may follow into practical effect. If the Independents are sure that Beaver's success would be a misfortune, I should advise them to make his defeat as certain as they could."

A GOOD NOMINATION. "Do you think that General Beaver's nomination is in obedience to Senator Cameron's authority?"

"I think that General Beaver's is a better nomination than would have been got from Cameron if it had not been for the Independent movement. But his nomination is undoubtedly the work of Cameron, and Cameron's nomination is certainly distasteful to the Independents. They demand recognition. Their strength warrants recognition in the nomination for Governor, but it has not been given. Cameron has conceded only those offices which he thought would have the least effect upon his reelection to the United States Senate, such as Congressmen-at-large and the Judgeship. The concessions do not weaken his power as the political dictator of the State."

"You do not think the principles agreed upon by the Conference at the Continental Hotel are borne out in the nominations?"

"No. The Harrisburg platform is empty, and the ticket does not bear out the principles of the Continental Conference. Senator Cameron has always worked against those principles, and his ticket bears out his past policy, the end being to retain his power, in which President Arthur is helping him all he can. The nomination is part of the Stalwart movement of the Administration, in so far as it is a defiance of the Independent movement. That movement is against Cameron's right to name a candidate beforehand. Now Cameron did name Beaver; so that the question is not as to whether Beaver is a good man or not, but whether Cameron is to be allowed to dictate nominations."

"Do you think the Independents' force will be broken by the minor concessions made in the Harrisburg ticket?"

"The Independents are stronger than ever. I think that many more will vote for a third State ticket than voted for Wolfe. If I did not think that more than fifty thousand votes would be mustered I should not advise a third ticket; but the Independent strength has grown more than anyone can definitely tell. President Arthur's course in making every appointment Senator Cameron asked for, notwithstanding Senator Mitchell's opposition, has greatly swelled the Independent ranks and weakened Cameron's support on Republicans who have the true interests of the party at heart. I have in mind one glaring instance of this. Some of us waited upon President Garfield last year, and despite Senator Cameron's opposition induced the President to appoint Lucius Thompson, Surveyor of the Port of Philadelphia. Mr. Cameron was away from Washington, but he telegraphed to his friends in the Senate that he was opposed to the appointment, and the Senate adjourned before confirming it. But after Garfield's death Arthur appointed Nevin, who was Cameron's man, and who was confirmed. The Independents feel that such conduct as this is scandalous. President Arthur is doing all that Garfield wanted to accomplish—he has thrown his whole weight squarely against Garfield's policy and so far as this is felt in Pennsylvania it has strengthened the Independent movement."

The Farmers and the Literary Revolution. A recent issue of the "American Agriculturist" contains some insinuations reflecting upon the character of the Useful Knowledge Publishing Co., of New York. They are insinuations only, no direct allegations being made. Their only foundation is malice and fear, on the part of the Agriculturist publishers. The average cost of books published by The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, in proportion to their real value is less than one fifth of the average cost of the agricultural books published by the Orange Judd Co. Within less than three years the "Literary Revolution" gave the American people over one million dollars' worth of the choicest books the country has ever seen; more in bulk and in real value than Judd has given them in a third of a century, and more than he would have given them for five million dollars. No class is abused more abominably by the book publishers than the farmers. I was a farmer boy before I was a publisher, and know something of both sides. Twenty-five years ago I was a barefooted boy, driving an ox-breaking team through the hazel-brush and prairie grass of Iowa, and reading Grinshaw's "England" and "The New York Tribune" between times and by the firelight at night, and I got there a little too much of "Useful Knowledge" and of strength to allow baseless slander to overthrow the enterprise to which I have given my life. Judd shall realize his fear that the Useful Knowledge Publishing Co. will publish agricultural books as well as other books, and it will not charge $1.50 for a book that does not cost 15 cts. to manufacture. In response to pressing and almost distressing calls from all over the country, from farmers, farmers' boys and teachers, it will also enter the field of school-book publishing presently, and we shall see what will become of the high prices of the rich and grasping publishers in that field. The Useful Knowledge Publishing Company does what Judd, and no other of the old-line publishers do, it sends its books to any part of the United States and allows privilege of examination before payment is required. It supplies its agents with copies of its cheap and beautiful publications for distribution among their customers, for examination at their leisure, and allows the return of any books not wanted. Specimen pages of its publications, catalogues, and terms to club agents, booksellers, and canvassers will be sent free upon request. Address the Useful Knowledge Publishing Company, 18 Vesey St., New York. John B. Alden, Business Agent.
