The Opera House was packed full, upwards of 550 tickets having been sold to the entertainment, besides the children who took part in the exercises and did not buy tickets

The Introductory Speech by Mis-Bertha Barrett, a miss of seven summers, in boy's clothes, took the house bý storm.

The singing of the Euporlam Quar tette-Ciub, was excellent, and was very pleasant feature of the evening's entertainment. The May celebration was as pleasant

The Hoyden (Dialogue) was a neat and refreshing little piece which pleased the audience immensely. And while the others did admirably we are at his inimitable productions will give compelled to especially praise the almost superb acting of Miss Ella Kime, who in this as well as the several others roles she assumed, would have The U. THE BROOM DRILL Inst struck Ridgway, and on the se casion of this entertainment Prof. Johnson' decided to add it as one of features of the evening. Ridgway Broom Battalion, was commanded by Captain Florence M. wenting a George Washington hat, with white plume, gold epaulets, crimson cross belt trimmed with gold, and with girdle and apron of crimson also trimmed with gold. 'In her hand she carried a large peacock feather duster also elaborately trimmed in crimson and gold. As the curtain rose the Captain advanced from the left of the stage, made a military salute to the audience and then took position at the right, front of the stage, and gave the command Full in. The battalion railled from the wings and quickly formed in members of tile companys were white the fields of their glary, where they felt to the dresses, crimson dusting caps, with battle's storm, or who, sricken with wounds crimson cross belts, girdle and a company on wasted with dresse, in no back from their crimson cross belts, girdle and apfon, (all pinked on the edges). The broom's were trimmed with a widecrimen band around the sweep, and with two erimson bows, one three inches from the sweep and the other four inches from the end of the point or stick. The brooms were carried with the brush or sweep part up. And as the battalion formed in line, and gave the salute ours. It is but a simple set, but the spirit that under arms the audience burst into a loud shout of applause. The manual of arms was gone through with in regular order, to the satisfaction of the audience, who were especially delighted at the "stack arms" which was executed in true military precision. All through, the manual of arms was executed with soldier like exactness, the slight errors only serving to highten the effect of the scene and bring out in stronger contrast, the perfection of the movements. The marching peets of life that would be blasted. was excellent, many of the evolutions receiving rapturous applause from the audience. The Cross in Circle aud Right Forward Fours Right, were applauded even more loudly than; the other movements. The battalion marched with regular step while the alignment of fours at a turn could not be bettered by troops of the line. Old soldiers went firto ecstacy, the young soldiers of Co. H were white with jealousy, while ladies, gentlemen, old maids and children voted the drill a grand success. The young ladies are deserving of great praise for the entirely excellent manner In which they con ducted themselves throughout the exhibition. We append a list of the name of the young ladies in the battation: Captain-Florence M. Osterhout. M. Osterhout.

in "Songs of Seven," for which they deserve the thanks of the school, The Quartette Club deserves specia nention.

The orchestra was first-class. The entire entertainment was grand success, and Mr. Johnson and the teachers of the Borough schools, certainly have shown themselves entirely capable of getting up an entertainment that pleases all, old as well-ad young. Where all did so well it is extremely difficult to award the palm, to any particular one, and in the few hustances we have done this it is not to detruct from the merit ocany of the rest, but simply as a mark of regard for the extra exertion of these particularones; One and all did wolf, the tittle when and the large ones. STATE-COMMITTEE.

Headquarters Republican State Committe, St. Cloud Hotel. Philadelphia. May 17, 1882.

THE REPUBLICANS OF PENNSYL-

VANIA: The Republican State Committee thus early announces the opening of ts Headquarters, and asks the prompt o-operation of all active Republicans, to the end that the details of what nust prove a great canvass may rewive the most careful attention.

The Harrisburg Convention has submitted to the aufferage of the people a great ticket and a glorious platform. The ticket embodies a group of names which for ability, fitness and representative character, it is impossible to excel. teneral Benver is not only the type ofour soldiery -of that host which counted in its ranks nearly a quarter of million of Pennsylvanians when the Union of the States was imperilled-but his deeds and sufferings for the cause place him in the front rank of the heroes ofthat war. As Republicans we vowed in its darker hours that political ingratitude should never be shown to any of these beroes, "all other things being equal." In this instance all other things are more than equalled; they are excelled in so far that our maimed soldier candidate for Governor embodies all the higher qualities of the statesman, the orator and the christian. Senator Davies for Lieutquant Governor, represents the free unshaken talent, of the section which gave us a Wilmot and a Grow. Wm. Henry Rawle, for the Supreme Court, is the best product of Philadelphia's brilliant bar, and in the world of legal letters bears a fame so bright that our continent cannot bind it John M. Greer, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, is as strong in politics as in physique, and throughout a distinguished career in the State senate has been recognized as the champion of the men who have developed our rivers of oil and made the world their channel. Thomas M. Marshall, the most independent of all independent thinkers in our West, is the best example our State affords of the citizen whose qualifications have compelled the office to bunt the man, He will aid in keeping intact what in ower House of Congress." The ticket thus fairly and fully repesents every living element of Repulsfeanism, The platform is more pronounced than any ever before adopted in the state-pronounced in seeking every legitimate political advance touching improvement of methods and fthe carliest possible triumph of princithemature of things must be a very narrow Republican margin in the Pennsylvania is now freer in her forms of Republican primary action than any other State in the Union. now more fully enforces this policy than any of her sister States. The present platform and the rules embodied therein secure to primary oction claim to increased liberty, and these booksellers supply them, and the pubwth than any known to our history. As a rule good things in politics which come to stay, come step by step. the pace increasing only as all become more and more ready to receive. The progress of the Republican party foreibly attests a -fact which has grown into a maxim. In its infancy the party could but announce its opposition to the further extension of slavery. Extension once forbiden, its wisest champion-the martyred Lincolnpatiently struggled in the earlier years of his first adminitration for compensated emancipation. His appeals were rejected by the parties interested. War's grim necessity emancipated. and then a great struggle followed for equality before the law-but another step, and one which looks timid now vet which was bold enough then. Civil rights accomplished, manhood sufferage came through even more painful stages. To have demanded the greater boon from the beginning-the final step which included and outreachall the others-would have led to a fatal slip. The men who proved their prowess in these struggles were those who had the wisdom to guide with care and good cheer, and so to stand

> Of such were Lincoln, Stevens, Gar-And now the Republican party of our. State having aided in securing hudian rights through legal forms, in its recent Convention wisely directed its attention to the growth of liberty in primary action. In Republican Government it is frequently wise in citizens to imitate in the forms of voluntary political action those laid down by the law, for in this way all the people become familiar with the law, and its workings; the exceptions point to times and occasions when it is desir able to change the law, and to prepare sentiment for that change. The constitutional law of Pennsylvania fixes the number of Senators and Representatives at 251, a maximum which the platform preserves in the selection of Delegates to future State Conventions, but it at the same time wisely protects the primary right of each Republican voter in the declaration that delegates voter in the declaration that delegates shall be selected as Senators and Representatives are selected. This is popular and representative suffrage carried ular and representative suffrage carried into primary action, giving to local sovereignty the say whether it shall be popular or representative. Either is a great advance, and in the advance the party of the State has only refrained from interference with the right of home rule in primary details.

with the people as not to lose their opportunities for increasing usefulness.

Loo's carefully at the platform, and you will see not only successive but cuiminating steps to every remedy and steps pointing to every liberty

ADDRESS OF THE REPUBLICAN which wisdom can suggest. These are reforms of to day. Only evenomed sophistry can call them reforms of tomorrow. The ticket which high honor recognizes every element of the party; the platform embodies every principle which the knowledge of men in dispassionate conference, committee,or convention, could suggest as abreast of the times. The Republican party redeems its pledges. It has never forfeited its word, and neither misconstruction nor taunt can shake its record or purpose in this regard. Accomplished reforms will be maintained; promised reforms will be realized, and that they may be maintained and realized the State committee asks all who lean toward Republicanism to fall into line under the old standard, that a victory sure to be won may be doubly assured. In a contest where nearly all for at stake they do best who are most willing to sacrifice personal destres, fudividual shades of opinion, personal ambition and interest, for the conjunct cause. In such contests a shrewd and unsrcupulous enemy too often prompts the lifting of the red hand of faction, so that it may serve as a "will-o' the wisp" to lead the unwary aside and into quagnifies, where they must remain without a flag, without a purpose, and without a goal.

There is but one enemy to fight. It is the old one, which in major part was false to the Union in its hours of danger; which subsequently stood but as an obstruction to the rights of men; which to-day represents a reaction opposed to American labor, to our material advancement in manufactures and commerce, to the redemption of our nation's pledges. With settled purpose not to be diverted from their object, the Republicans of Pennsylvania will face this common enemy, and with it alone decide the great issues of the conflict.

And the better to do this let all Republicans who have any suggestions to make, correspond with their State and County Committees, -counsel with their neighbors,-invite an encourage the ever-eufficient aid of their local and metropolitan Republican press-prompt the active to greater activity, -inspire effect in the new and untried,-hasten primary action where haste can do no wrong.-sutleipate in the earliest hours of the canvass that machinery of the law which requires early registries of voters-and in all thinge get ready for a great battle. Serve early and manly notice upon the enemy that every honorable effort and resource shall be employed to achieve a victory which many regard as vital to the great Republican party and its principles.

By order of the Republican State Committee.
