The bull flung bis head to the ground, but the rider held on to the tail and kept his seat. With another roar the bull rushed off and out upon the prairie. The race continued for a mile and a half, the whole crowd following on their horses. The bull plunged now and then into the sage brush with the idea of ridding himself of his burden, but it was of no use, and the sharp rowels kept pricking him on. He was conscious that he was killing her, but all his efforts to throw off the timbers were futile. Assistance came in two hourstoo late! The spirit of the wife had fled, and the husband felt that in a measure he was the cause of her death. The idea made him nearly frantic for several days. The babe was also killed.
