sion is gontained in the eighth chapter of Acts, 2d verso: ... And devout men carried Stephen to his city and stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their cloths at a young mul's feet whose name was Saul A. And they stoned Stephon, calling upon Hod; and saying, Lord Jesus, re-ceiva my spirit. And he knoeled down and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not, this sin coclesiastical year very normorable in the annals of the Church.

Of Dr. Ludlow, he need say nothing now, inaxmuch as they had already paid their tribute of regard for his precious memory within those walls. The Rev. Dr. Abraham Polhemus, who de-The Rev. Dr. Abranam romenus, who acparted this life, after, a lingering illness, in the month of October last, was cut off in the vigor of his days, and at a point in his ministry that gave rich promise of unusual success. After twenty years of service in a retired, and yet prominent church in the country, (at Hopewell, N. Y.) he had left that scene of his popular and useful labors to assume the charge of the North Beformed Dutch Church in Newark, No. J.—a new and very important enterprise, which had commenced as an out-growth from the First Reformed Dutch Church Internative of Treas Mermoures—It is placed the most down to which east out doubt and feer, in the part of the health of this with corone the part of the health of this with corone the part of the health of this with corone the part of the health of this with the rows of the health of this with corone the part of the health of this with the rows of the health of this with the rows of the health of this with the rows of the health of his flock, and had received their testimonies for the power of smaring grace, should thus suddenly and violently be stut out from the world, and from those very sources of consolation which he had brought to others. But, although he was unconscious, or at least unable to express his sense of scenes about him, we knew hot what higher and sweeter communings he had held with God. One little sentence that parted his lips was all that surviying friends had to follower of his dying exercises: "Jesus, favo mercy on me." But that sentence was like the opening of the gates of heaven. It heeded no new testimony in the last hour to convince any one that he was a child of God and a servant of Christ. His heaven. It needed no new testimony in the lest hour to convince any one that he was a child of God and a servant of Christ. His child of God and a servant of Christ. His life, his long ininiarry, were better than dying words to attest that fact. Yet he could not resist the thought, that as Jesus showed himself to his martyr Stephen, so did he reveal himself to his martyr Stephen, so did he reveal himself to his venerable servant; that while by his Providence he shut him out from the dearest of earth's scenes, by his grace he opened to him celestial glories, that all the voices of the loving ones around him fell dead upon his ear; that the Sayloir himself might be his best comforter while he lingered during those three days in deep unconsciousness of citward things—and that the brief whispeted prayer, closus, have mercy on me, was but the faint monition to his weighing iriends, of heavenly sights and sounds which already filled the soul that was done with time and earth. Doubtless it had been the best way for him to difference, ray from heaven suffused the various avies of perturbate hours. Doubtless it had been the best way for him to die said as it was to those who loved him. In the had-sone gray from the aven sufficied the whole scene with immortal light. Since the death of the Rev. Dr. Milnor there had been no such funeral solemnity in during the course of potraiture known in the Photosphic of the Rev. Dr. Milnor there had been no such funeral solemnity in ministers of view, exciting all others in point of likeness and delicacy of coloring, with a most wonderful past Tuesday afternoon. Paganism itself had honored these sacred impulses with its most imposing ceremonies, though it had been reserved, for Christianity alone to wring the only feal rictories from the grasp of roluctant death? The learned and the unlearned Christian slike challenged infidelity to abide this test of dissolving nature, and a near eternity. They alone could stand upon the narrow isthmus which separates the two termities, and from the Atlantic, with its storms and terrors, look out with igo, unspeakable upon that great Pacific, with its gentle gales, its chiming presence of lim who sitteth upon its ever-lating floads. SABBATH OBSERVANCES.—A meeting of the ceiva my spirit. And he kneed down and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay-not this sin to their charge, and when he had said this he fell asleep."

This, said the speaker, told the whole story to our hearts, without comment. The whole subject, under the several heads to which we have here referred, was ably presented, and constituted a fitting prelude to the tribute he was now about to pay to Rev. Doctors Ludlow, Polhemius, and Knox, all prominent ministers in the Reformed Dutch Church, who have decased within the short period of four months.

The decase of three such men, within so hrief a poriod, was calculated to make the ceclesiastical year very memorable in the annals of the Church.

Of Dr. Ludlow he head say nothing now.

Dr. Lutlow he had said this he Evangelical olergy of this city and vicinity was hefel on Monday vening last, at the Spingler Institute, to consider the course proper to be pursued for the promition of order on the Sabbath. And decided in cha Dr. LIVINGSTONE .- This intrepid and dis-Dr. Livingstone.—This intrepid and distinguished Missionary traveller has withdrawn from the London Missionary Society, and returns to Africa in the service, and under the patronage of the Government. A correspondent of the New York Observer says that he will have greater facilities for the stupendons work before him, but there is some resson to fear that he may not have equal freedom, and that the help of the State may prove an incumbrance. The simplicity and nobleness of his nature, however, must be a guarantee for his devotedness to the cause of Christian civilization, and we cannot see all the designs of Providence in retailon to the region he has gone to explore. Its consistent plety had been felt wherever he moved, and it was the double confidence in this and in his capacities for enlarged usefulness which had given him great weight in the councils of the church, and in the many charritable and religious institutions with which he was actively connected for many years.

It has seemed strange to many that whon this good man, this faithful preacher, and this dear, pastor, came to die, no human voice, however loved, could minister to his soul, and that he who had cheered dying hundreds of his flock, and had received their testimonies for the power of smazing grace, should thus suddenly and violently be stut out from the world; and from those very sources of consolation which he had brought to others.
