After Napoleon-What? Nearly seven years ago, Mr. Charles Ed-WARDS LESTER Wrote a book called "The Naoleon Dynasty; by the Berkiey Men." It vas a popular view of the history and condition of the BONAPARTE family-rather sketchy and generalizing, but graphic and forcible. It was considerably in favor of the Napoleonic race, but did not commit any misstatements to support the views it expressed and advocated. The book sold well—the very name was taking -and a now edition, bringing the history of

We find in it, however, some observations which are striking, from their common sense and obvious truth. Here is one of them: "The Napoleon Dynasty is, and will be for some time to come, an inevitable governmen in France—it is the only possible compromise between Bourbonism, or the past, and Republicanism, or the future."

This is an extremely suggestive remark. as it had been by CHARLES the Tenth, rushed into Republicanism, early in 1848, to end in the re-establishment of the Empire, at the close of 1852. The Administration is considerably exercised by e Oregon boundary and Mexican treaty quesions, and devotes to their consideration whatever time it can spare from its great work of anathemalizing and excommunicating Douglas and his adhe rents from the Democratic party. If it is possible to raise a war-breeze on the question of the title to the island of San Juan, without incurring any real danger of actual hostilities with Great Britain, it will certainly do so. Let us hope that he will at lenst so manage the present dispute that the future historian can truly say of his Administration: "It found the title to San Juan a mooted quostion, and it concluded a treaty by which the American claim to that island was clearly established." There is a not inconsiderable body of Democrats who feel it incumbent upon them to praise the National Administration at all political assemblages in which they participate, and if it is enabled to achieve some object for which it can be justly praised, the wear and tear of conscience to which these devotes of regularity are now subjected will be sonsibly diminished.

By all means, therefore, let the Administration astonish the country by a tangible act which wild assemblag to refrieve its sadly damaged reputation, and make conscientious and intelligent Demo-

If the proverb is true that "the darkest hour comes just before the dawn of day," the period must be near at hand when it should afford us a series of remarkable proofs of statesmanship and administrative ability. As I wrote you recently, there is no doubt about the fact that arrangements of a very extensive character have been made to revive the slave trade upon our shores. There have already been a considerable number of slaves imported, and some of them are now owned, and paraded about by prominent men in the South, who seem to feel very much the same sort of pride, in possessing an African negro, who affords in himself a tangible proof of the successful infringement of the laws against the slave trade, as some of your northern Abolitionists, do in concealing and exhibiting to their friends a runaway negro, whom they have aided to shield from the operation of the fugitive slave law. There are also a number of vessels now out seeking cargoes of slaves, with the intention of landing them at an early day upon our shores, and those who are thus engaged count confidently upon the success of their operations. But, while this trade is being thus really recommenced, I do not think that any very strong effort will be made to legalize the traffic. a
