"This policy is probably in accordance with the views of General Scott. Old men will cling to past ideas." This old man, puffed up with the vanity of what he considers his exploits in our happor in 1832, is doubtless ambitious of renewing a similar glorification over his name, by Yankee plunderers and Southern imbedile Union-savers. Alas! the old man has sadly outlived his era. Oblivious of the changes of time, and the transactions of the ship countern imbeche conton-avers. Also the cold man has sadly outlived his era. Oblivious of the day, he still sits dreaming dreams of things long passed away—gasing at the vain soap bubbles of an aged brain. Senility must plead for his coly. Three brothers; named William Hill, Je., a Hill, and Russell Hill, who reside five miles out on the Nashville Railroad, were attacked at their residences, this morning, about four o'clock, by a gang of rowdies, headed by Jim Walker and Jeff. Rodgers. William Hill was asleep, in the bed with his wife, whon the fatal wound was inflicted, and so close was the gun placed to the bed that the powder burned the hand of his wife. Jesse Hill, who resided in the same house, was also shet, in the neck and back, causing timediate death. The party then went to the house of Russell Hill, some two and a half miles from the place where the other two were murdered, and, while their hands were still wet with the blood of their other victims, there, without cause or provocation, shot Russell dead in his ewn house.
