

The Press. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1862. A CALL TO ARMS. PROCLAMATION OF THE MAYOR.

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA. SEPTEMBER 11, 1862. CITIZENS OF PHILADELPHIA: At a late hour to-night the Governor of Pennsylvania has addressed to me the following despatch:

What can we say in a time like this, when words are meaningless, and our exhortation can be little more than sound and fury, signifying nothing? The danger that hangs over us, must speak for us. The anticipation of rapine and desolation, the fear that civil liberty may be swamped in this awful flood—all admonish us to respond to this great call.

Let the response to this urgent call be prompt and effective. I hereby request that all able-bodied citizens shall assemble at 10 o'clock on Friday morning; at the precinct houses on their respective election districts, in readiness to obey the summons to immediate service.

ALEXANDER HENRY, Mayor of the City of Philadelphia. Office of the Mayor of the City of Philadelphia. SEPTEMBER 11, 1862.

The members of the Select and Common Councils are hereby notified to assemble at their respective Chambers, TO-DAY (FRIDAY) NOON.

ALEXANDER HENRY, Mayor of Philadelphia. THE WAR. The advance of the rebel army from Frederick to Hagerstown, where it had taken up its position, by the latest accounts, seemed to explode the theory that Baltimore or Washington had been aimed at as points of attack.

It is a fact that the people of Pennsylvania, and particularly of Philadelphia, that they should have a correct understanding of the dangers of their present position, and of the duties which now devolve upon their patriotism.

On the 21st of September, the day that an hour devoted to the defense of their homes to-day will be worth a hundred years of peace to-morrow.

Initiating the war, the simple of James the Second, who issued brass half-crowns in Ireland in 1689, whereby coin valued half the Confederate Congress has voted $200,000 for the purpose of coining copper money, much alloyed to the extent of $5,000,000.

THE NEWS. NEW HAVEN has received her quota of 662 men under a drafted regiment, the last day, the march was poured out like water by the citizens to reach their patriotic and honorable ranks.

THE CALL TO ARMS. The proceedings in Councils yesterday, the message of the Mayor to that body, and the proclamation of the Governor, as printed this morning, will remind the people of Philadelphia that the hour has at last come for the performance of the noblest duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.

THE WAR ON OUR BORDERS. Important Order from Gov. Curtin. 50,000 PENNSYLVANIANS CALLED INTO ACTIVE SERVICE.

The Rebels Break up their Camp at Frederick. MARCH FOR HAGERSTOWN. HAVE 300 PIECES OF ARTILLERY. THE OCCUPATION OF HAGERSTOWN.

Pennsylvania to be made to "Howl." CHAMBERSBURG UNPREPARED. The Citizens Fleeing to Harrisburg by Extra Trains.

REBELS INVADING THE STATE IN SEVERAL COLUMNS. They will Probably Concentrate at a Given Point. The Duty of the Hour.
