A. Turner, with descriptive letter-press by Mr. William Young, editor of The Albion, is equally worthy of regard. These publishers have brought out several original juvenile volumes, neatly illus-trated. Among these are "Keep a Good Heart," a Christmas tale, by Cousin Carrie; "Harry's Vacation," by W. C. Richards; "The Pet Lamb," by Cousin Alice; and "At Home or Abroad," and

"Pleasures and Profits," by Mrs. Manners. Whoever is fond of good novels (and we confess to such a liking) should read two just published by the Appletons. One is "Queen Mab," by Julia Kavanagh, a successful English writer; and the other, "Round the Block," by some unnamed American writer. This last, which is racy of the soil, is the best native born work of fiction we have read forwe know not how many years. Every incident in t might have occurred, and every man, woman, and hild in the tale has certainly existed in New York society.

Of the Holiday Books, published by J. G. Gregory, New York, we have examined six. They are all got up with great taste, and the engravings are printed with a careful skill that brings out ever the most delicate lines. "Christmas Poems and Pictures," is a collection of nearly all the carols, songs, and descriptive poems, relating to Christmas, by American and English poems. The selection is admirable. The illustrations consist of thirty wood engravings, (as fine specimers of the art as any one could desire to see,) from drawings or paintings by Birket Foster, John Gilbert, G. Perkins, Kenny Meadows, William Harvey, F. W. Quartley, F. A. Chapman, T. Nast, Raphael, and Rubens. The binding is rich, without being gaudy. Companion to this is a beautiful book, called "Christ was Born on Christmas Day." A carol bearing this title, with the words by the Rev. J. M. Neale, and the music by the Rev. Thomas Helmore, is illustrated here, with original drawings by John A. Hows, engraved on wood in the first style of the art, and nothing could be better in its way. Designer and an-gravers are American, and the result is one of the handsomest gift-books of the year. Another gift-book is "The Vsgabonds," a Beranger-like ballad by J. T. Trowbridge, illustrated by Darley, and printed on tinted paper. The poem, full of genuine humanity and mingled humor and pathos, is worthy of being illustrated by a great artist, such as Darley is. Mr. Gregory's three new juveniles, each with title-page and frontispiece beautifully printed in colors, and numerous other engravings, are "Little Bird Red and Little Bird Blue," "The Pet Lamb and other Stories," and the "Illustrated Book of Songs for Little Boys and Girls." These are beautiful books, each and all.

George W. Carleton is one of the most enterprising of the young publishers of New York. He made a great hit with Victor Hugo's novel, "Les Missirables." and has also been successful in many other ventures. We have to thank him for a translation of M. Ernest Renan's "Life of Jesus," before any had been published in England. A remarkable volume it iz, being the first of several on "The Origins of Christianity." Renan takes a point of view different from that occupied by Straugs, the German Tom Paine. He writes as hol ling natural and repudiating supernatural belief in the greatness and goodness of Jesus. Now and then, he expresses himself as if he believed in the divinity of Jesus, but soon intimates a different idea, and, towards the close, actually insinuates that the Raising of Lazarus was a trick, got up by the Disciples, the family of Lazarus, and Lazarus himself, in order to excite the public! There are many passages of great beauty in this socalled "Life," many very pleturesque descriptions. But it is the work of a doubter. Yet it will sell largely. It is not calculated to do much mischief. Renan so perpetually begs the question that it is not easy to separate fact from. assertion in his pages. The translation, by Mr. Wilbour, is respect-ably executed, though sometimes a little too hard and literal. However, it is free from the New Englandisms which abound in his otherwise spirited version of "Les Misérables."

Mr. Carleton, who announces a translation of Louis Napoleon's "Life of Julius Cæsar," (from advanced sheets?) has added three new works to his reperiore of popular fiction. All three have the merit of being eminently' readable. The first is "Was he Successful?" by Richard B. Kimball, the history of Hiram Mecker, a Connecticut lad, who eventually becomes a millionaire merchant in New York, and is a special rascal. The contrast between country and city life is remarkably well drawn, and the character of the hero is developed with great skill. The fair author of "Rutledge" has brought out a story, called "Louie's Last Term at St. Mary's," published by Mr. Carleton, which, it strikes us, we have seen before. It is a good story of school life, however, told with spirit, and particularly strong in its delineation of the lights and shade of character. Lastly, our excellent townsman, Mr. T. S.
