Merrick & Sons, on the morning of the 6th inst.

The first witness called was Mr. George Priest, employed as an assistant foreman to Mr. Dauby; was at the foundry when the explosion occurred; am acquainted with the general construction of the boiler; knew of the leak; it was in the fire box, near the back part; never was inside the boiler to ascertain the piesure of strain; the originer was found opposite the boiler, much mutilated; the fire nan appeared to have been somewhat soatded; his fired was red and swollen; the engineer supeared to have been killed by a blow on the skull, and not from sealding; the fireman was the only one that gave evidence of having been seatded; I left the boiler five or ten minutes before the explosion took place; there were two leaks, both on the same side of the bridge, but running into two furnaces; the leak was near the middle leg of the boiler; this indicates that he was in front of the boiler; the object; the engineer must have been blown further to the west, rather a little to the sonthwest; the distance from the boiler to the machine shop was about forty feet; the engineer now as higher than the boiler; the engineer must have been blown downstains; I examined the presaure-gauge of the boiler, and found fifty five pounds of steam on; the water gauge indicated there was more water than usual in the boiler; the opineer must have been blown downstains; I examined the presaure-gauge of the boiler.

Mr. G. A. Hoffman was qualified as a controller to fill the unexpired term of Thomas Potter, resigned. Communications were received from various sec-signed.

Communications were received from various sec-tions, informing the Brard of the election and pro-motion of certain teachers. One from the Sixth sec-tion was read, instructing Mr. Palechorp, controller from that section, to vote in favor of the majority report in reference to the Grils' High School, and also that he shall vote for a female principal of said morprobatic and the construction of the bodier; this is left to the foreman of the bodier adop; two pair of the same bodiers are now in use on vessels; they are run at a pressure of twenty-eight to thirty of the same bolists are now in use on vessels; they pounds of steam.

Angus hic'pherson, William J. Hoyt, Bernard Strain, Dominio Farren, Richard V. Newsham, Samuel Brown, Sr., Partick Gibson, John Grant, Jacob Gibson, John Smith, Thomas Stevens, Michael Murray, James Drew, Bernard Moddams, and James Bayne, Jr., were examined as witcesses, as to the explosion, its effects upon them, the sound thereof, and as to the competency of the engineer.

One of the witnesses described the first sound like a stram hiss, then a sullen roar, which lasted from one to two minutes, and seemed like the waves dashing on the sea shore. Another described the sound like the rush and explosion of a rocket. Another that the first he heard was like a cannon report, and no hiss. Another saide heard a crash; one saw the yard full of steam, while another saw no steam at all. One of the witnesses, who was within twenty five feet of the boiler when it expleded, found his clothing next day filled with particles of motter, brick, and glass. The witnesses gave an excellent character of McLoughlin, as to his competency, care, and soberness. chool.

The Committee on Accounts reported bills smounting to $43,985 61, which were ordered to be Jamoning to $42,500 st, which we extract to be paid.

Ir. Nebinger called for a suspension of the rules, to allow the reading of the act of Assembly, which he had offered, and also to act on the reception of Mr. Hickey's credentials.

A debate of some length ensued, in which it was asserted that Mr. Kline, now representing the Seventeenth section, had resigned as a member of the Sectional Board, and the new act of Assembly debated a person not a member of a sectional board from acting as a controller. It was charged that as Mr. Kline was an opponent of Mr. Crear principle. Ir. Kine was an opponent of Mr. Cregar, principal of the Girls' High Senool, and would vote for is expulsion at this meeting, the friends of Mr. cregar had secured the passage of the new act of seembly, by which Mr. Hickey, who is understood be a friend of Mr. Cregar, claims a seat as convaller. competency, care, and solveness.

THE VERDICT.

The jury retired, and in half an hour agreed upon a verdict, which, with a brief though comprehensive condensation of the evidence, we present in full. The jury say: In examining into the cause of the late disastrous explosion, we find the following facts presented to us:

A boiler, built upon a certain plan, had been in use in the establishment for seven years; it had proved economical in its consumption of fuel, and occupied but little space; as, however, it had been in constant use for the above number of years, it was deemed advisable by the firm to construct a new boiler, which might either work alternately with the old one, or take its place in supplying them with steam. Treller.

Dr. Nebinger said that he knew nothing of the means by which the act was passed.

Mr. Kline said he had as cauch right to a seat in this Board as Dr. Nebinger. In fact, the manner of the latter gentleman's election was of doubtful legality. He (Dr. N.) came here, said Mr. Kline, for a specific purpose, and had used certain members to accomplish his object. He had no further service for those gentlemen. The speaker did not care for the act of Assembly, and he b-heved the men who secured its passage would resort to any means or carrying out their ends. arrying out their ends.
Mr. Freeborn. "That's so." Mr. Shippen said that it was disgraceful that any egislation should have been sought to affect the ceat of those members who now hold seats according to law. An act was now before the Legislature team.

The old boiler had never given them any trouble, except in one part called the water legs, in the back part of which, that is, back of the bridge wall, sediment had collected, and caused the iron to rust ut of cffice.
Dr. Nebinger said that he had heard nothing of it.
Mr. Freeborn. You have been charged with pushng it through.
The motion to suspend the rules to consider Mr. Out.
Satisfied with the efficiency of the first boiler, the new one was designed upon the same general plan as the old one, every presention being taken (as was supposed) to make it strong and durable, and to obviate the trouble arising from the accumulation of sediment in the water legs, a modification was made in that part. ing it through.
The motion to suspend the rules to consider Mr.
Hickey's case was not asreed to.
The act of Assembly, by su seral consent, was read.
The Committee on Boys' High School reported a resolution repealing the rule requiring params to be made two studies. Agreed to.
The consideration of the majority report in reference to the charges preferred against the Girls' High School, was then taken up, and the resolution, as annexed to the committee's report, discussed. It was as follows:
Resulted. That the position of Principal of the Girls' High and Normal School be declared vacant from the first day of May next and until a new principal shall be declared; and further, that the Screttary in directed to further the present principal of said school with a duly directed compared to the process to postpone for one month. Mr. Schippen spoke against the postponement, and aghed for some reason why such a request should be made. It was evident there was some wire-pulling going on which was not altogether right. Many memters of the Board had been almost bribed to elsy away from this meeting. It was diagraceful that there rhealld be so many attempts made to smother up the lacts of the case. tion of sediment in the water legs, a modification was made in that part.

The second boiler being completed, was tested and found to lesk in a certain place. This leak was mended, and after several trials the boiler was pronounced tight and ready for use. The boiler was then fired, and furnished steam for the establishment at first in connection with the old one, and finally for several days by itself.

On the morning of April sixth, the day of the explosion, the leak was found to have reopened to such an extent as to cause uncasiness as to the water supply on the part of the foreman of the establishment. Mr. Danby, who gave orders to have steam raised in the old boiler, and to draw the fires in the new one. m the new one.

While these orders were being carried out the ex-While these orders were being carried out the explosion occurred.

Examining into the competency of the man in charge of the boiler, the conviction is forced upon us that he was well qualified for his situation, and was a good, careful man.

Abundant testimony has also been given to prove that the pressure of ateam at or immediately before the explosion was not more than fifty-seven pounds, and that the boiler was well supplied with water.

The usual theories of explosions, namely, low water; sudden priming or forcing up of water into the heated steam, &c., seem not to be applicable to the present case, and we are forced into a consideration of the form of this boiler and the possible existence of some weak point which did not exist in the old one.

This boiler is of form similar to those used on steam vessels, and having flat sides and an arched roof, is manly dependant upon stays for its strength.

The sides seem to have been abundantly, supplied with these stays, and to have been but little injured by the explosion, while the whole of the boiler was thrown in an opposite the main part of the boiler was thrown in an opposite the main part of the boiler was thrown in an opposite the main part of the boiler was thrown in an opposite the main part of the boiler was thrown in an opposite of arched passages uned as furnaces; and passages being twentyone inches while, semi-tircular on the top or crown, and stayed from one to the other by a series of iron braces. The parts between the arches are what have been of the parts between the arches are what have been of the parts between the arches are what have been of the parts between the arches are what have been of the form the front to the bask of the boiler, thus forming powerful beams, thirty inches in depth, to resist the pressure of the steam tending to push the bottom could five heads, to prevent their spreading to the bottom, at both ends, to prevent their spreading to the bottom, at both ends, to prevent their spreading at the bottom, at both ends, to prevent plosion occurred.

Examining into the competency of the man in charge of the boiler, the conviction is forced upon us that he was well qualified for his attention, and was that there should be so many attempts made to smother up the facts of the case.

Dr. Nebinger urged a postponement. He was in favor of giving to the principal of the Girls' High School all the time possible to set himself right before the community. The speaker said he had no hard in the legislation by which it was sought to turn out Mr. Kline from the B sard. He could say that Harrieburg had been frequently visited by some gentlemen desirous to have themselves legislated into office.

Mr Kline asked if Dr. Nebinger meant that he (Kline) had endeavored to legislate himself into office? Mr Kline saked if Dr. Nebinger meant that he (Kline) had endeavored to legislate himself into office?

Dr. Nebinger said that he would mention no names. If Mr. Kline's conscience charged him with such a crime, it was a matter entirely with himself.

Mr. Green said that he felt a sympathy for any public officer who was turned out of office. But sympathy should not interfere with duty, and he felt it to be his duty to vote for the expulsion of Mr. Cregar. He did not desire to have the matter postponed a day. The prejudica against Mr. Cregar, on the part of the principals of the grammar schools, was so strong as to be of itself a sufficient reason for his removal.

Mr. Palethorp remarked that the great prosperity of the Girls' High School was sufficient testimony to the competency and ability of Mr. Cregar. It gave hm pleasure to say, that so far as he could observe, the management of the school was characterized by the highest intelligence and usefuness. The speaker was anxious for a postponement, especially as within the past twenty four hours he had received instructions from his Sectional Board to vote against Mr. Cregar. Probably with a conference with his Sectional Board he might change his views.

Mr. Levick gave his reasons for moving for a renoe with his Sectional Board he might change his views.

Mr. Levick gave his reasons for moving for a postponement. He said he had attended all the meetings of the committee of thevastigation, and the report of that committee was uojust. The section he repiesented (the Twelfth) had no grammar school, and he was, therefore, beyond the indusences which had been brought to bear upon other members. There was no guarantee that if Mr. Oregar was displaced a better man could be substituted. Mr. Oregar was displaced a better man could be substituted. Mr. Oregar was displaced a better man could be substituted. Mr. Oregar was displaced a better man could be substituted. Mr. Oregar was displaced a better man could be substituted. Mr. Oregar was displaced as determined to be substituted of the school teacher, and there were no charges yet brought sgainst his competency.

The motion to adjourn the consideration of the subject for one month was agreed to, by the following vote: The motion to adjourn the consideration of the surject for one month was agreed to, by the following vote:

NAYS—Messis. Freeborn, Green, Haines, Hilles, Hoffman, Kline, Rittenbouse, Shippen, Stewart, Youghau, Welah, Fietcher, president—12.

A resolution was then adopted appointing a committee to inquire whether any member of this Board holds his seat contrary to any act of Assembly.

Mr. Shippen offered a resolution instructing the sectional boards to take such measures as will prevent the pupils of schools from defacing private residences, which was agreed to.

A resolution was introduced that the Sectional Boards report the names of such teachers as have not agreed to. While this subject was under discussion, Mr. Freeborn made a statement to the effect that an examination was recently held for public school teacher in the Fourth section, that there were a large number of applicants, and high averages obtained. The first four on the list had attained average above 70, yet the position was given to a candidate who attained an average of only 33. The only reply which; the president of the Fourth Sectional Boards could make to the successful candidate at examination, was that she did not get as many votes as the lowest in the Fourth section made no reply to the statement of Mr. Freeborn. Your jury believe that the diminished strength which resulted from the change escaped the notice of the constructors, and that the making of the new boiler and its management afterwards were designed as precautionary measures, and were intended to avoid the very disaster which has fallen upon them and the unfortunate victims.

A GOLD CASE.

Frederick DicClade vs. Work, McCouch, & Co. This was an action of assumpsit to recover $583 money had and received. Plaintiff, who is a watter at an eating house in Walcut street, near Third, being smitten with the gold speculation fever in February, 1863, when gold was at a premium of 72½ per cent., bought of defendants $5,000 at that premium, to be delivered in thirty days; at the same time he deposited with defendants a "margin," as seems to have been customary, of $340 in gold, as an assurance that they should not sinter loss. The following is the memoradum or agreement, which was in evidence, showing the character of the transaction:

"Philadelphia, Feb. 21, 1863.—Frederick McClade has left three hundred and forty dollars in American gold as a margin on $5,000 American gold soid him this day at 72½. Buyer thirty days.

Soon after the date of that instrument gold commenced rapidly to fail, and plaintiff's "margin" was soon entirely absorbed. He failing to deposit an additional sum to keep good his margin defendants claimed that his original deposit was forfeited. At the end of the thirty days gold had declined to 40 per cent, premium, plaintiff thereby losing not only his $340 in gold—equivalent when deposited to $633 in greenbacks—but a considerable sum in addition, had he been called upon to pay it. Not being satisfied, however, with the turn matters had taken, he brought this suit to recover.

The evidence having been heard, and the case closed, Judge Sharwood charged the jury in substance, that if they believed the transaction was so understood by the parties, it was a valid contract, and the defendants were estitled to a verdict, if they had the gold in hand ready to deliver; but if it were a mere speculation upon the rise and fall of gold, and the parties had no intention of ever delivering it, then it was a wager, and an unlawful once; that the contract was invalid, an District Court-Judge Sharswood. forty years from date.
