The Worm Nuisance. The following letters, addressed to Dr. William Sharswood, by Professors Haldeman and Glover, on the subject that has become of much importance, will doubtless prove of interest and value to the public wolfare, coming, as they do, from acknow-ledged anthorities.—Ed. Press.

To the Editor of The Press.

Sir. It should be distinctly borne in mind, in reading the following notes of observations, that the habits of the worm alluded to in the first communication are those of the "basket worm," or theridoptoryx ephemore formis, which is the fabricator of the ecocoms seen dangling from the trees throughout the city; and though included amongst the insects injurious to follage, is not so much of a nulsance as the "measuring, or drop worm," which has become the pest of so large a portion of the shade trees of the city. Respectfully.

COLUMNA, PA., June 17, 1863.

DEAR SIR: I have received the various newspaper articles discussing the "worms" with which Philadelphia is afflicted, but as I am not now occupied with entomology, and have not studied the species in question, I am not prepared to discuss its listory. Several years ago, when the ecocons were being cut from the trees, in the spring, I brought some of them home for study, but subsequently finding them covered with numerous young larve, I destroyed them, fearing that they might be introduced into my own vicinity.

I think, from this superficial inspection, that the eggs are deposited visilian the cocoon—an important point, as it will indicate that the female is wingless, and does not leave it, so that those who clear their own trees of this species need not fear the moths from those of their neighbors. Compare Gailding on Oketicus, in the Transactions of the Linnean Society, vol. xv., p. 371, 1827.

If I had continued my experiment, I would have endeavored to discover the ichneumons that destroy these caterpillars, which, if ascertained, could be readily introduced, as well as predacous insects which prey upon them, such as Calesona, &c. European rooks would be useful, it ascertained, oned be readily introduced, as well as predacous insects which prey upon them, such as Calesona, &c. European rooks would be useful, it ascertained, oned be readily introduc public wolfare, coming, as they do, from acknow ledged authorities.—Ed. Press. favorite nesting places, the Lombardy poplars, would attract them.

But why should those interested not apply for information at the "High School 1" an institution upon which the city has peculiar claims, and in which natural history has had a prominent place for twenty or thirty years.

After means of prevention, such as cutting down and burning the cocoons, (pronounced by one correspondent to be useless) the proposition to collect and destroy the caterpillars is bost where practicable—a mode practiced in France, where the law requires it, to be done. If the caterpillars descend for the purpose of ascending other trees, they may be prevented in the usual mode—but not by scraping and whitewashing the trunks, as in Franklin Square. Yours, &c.,

TO WM. SHARSWOOD, Ph. D.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. Washington (D. C.), June 2, 1864. lives in cities, and is said to be very destructive to insects, although it is true that grain and small fruits in the neighborhood of towns and villages suffer from its predatory attacks, and it is found principally in and near towns; broeding in holes in the walls and undor enves, throughing the housetops and crowded streets, even in the midst of the smoke and dirt of London, where it feets upon whatever it can pick up in the street, principally upon the grains remaining undigested in the manner dropped by horses. No doubt it would thrive in our cities likewise, if the cold winters were not too severe for it. Before the sparrow is imported for the purpose of destroying caterpillars, however, it would be well to have all the advantages and disadvantages throroughly discussed and settled, so as not to introduce a new noxious bird.

The European robin redbreast is also very tame, and has a delightful song, but might prove too delicate here.

Any service I can render you shall be done with cate here.

Any service I can render you shall be done with pleasure. If you will forward specimens of the worms to the Department of Agriculture I will endeavor to trace out its habits and instincts, so as to find out what can be done to abate this nuisance.

I hope to be in Philadelphia in about two or three weeks, and shall do myself the pleasure of visiting you in order to learn more about these insects, and in the meantime remain your obedient servant,

Towend Glover. Towerd Glover.

City Railways vs. Their Patronage.

To the Editor of The Press:

Sir: The presidents of the city railways have declared that the public shall pay six cents a ride, and nine cents with an exchange ticket. These railroad companies first engineer to themselves the stock valued by them at three times the cost of road and fixtures, and then furnish accommodations or seats for only two-thirds the passengers, while the other third must stand in or outside the car, producing enormous receipts, from $25 to $35 per day to each car. The railroad presidents are not satisfied with this; are about to try how much the public will standfor they, the public, have either to stand or walk. One writer says walk, but I say different. The streets of Philadelphia are for the public good, and city railways are a great convenience, and no one company can expect to occupy a street to the exclusion of all others. Now, two lines on the same street will accommodate the public much better than one; the new line can straddle one rail of the old line. All the cars moving the same way, at regulated speed, will not interfere with or obstruct each other. The only sure protection against imposition is to let in competition, and every additional rail iaid in a street improves said street. Then, why not give the right to new companies, that will agree to charge five cents for a ride, and eight cents with an exchange ticket good on any day? To lay a second track on each street can accommodate two lines as well as one, and these railroad presidents be made to execut, and that the public are not depending on them alone. them alone.

I am truly yours,

PHILADELPHIA, June 14, 1864. Change of Currency on Passenger Cars. To the Editor of the Press:

Sin: There is reported, in your Issue of this morning, a case where change was refused for a ten-cent note on one of the passenger-railway cars, and where the passenger, not giving a cent additional to enable the conductor to make even change, was ejected from the car. ble the conductor to make even change, was ejected from the car.

Has a conductor on any public conveyance any legal right to refuse change under such circumstances?

Is not a forcible ejectment, under such circumstances, assault and battery, and indictable as such! Are not railway corporations bound in law to make change if they exact a fare exceeding five and less than ten cents, or any like fare?

Information on these points is carnestly requested.

Respectfully, J.A. H. Politeness at the Fair. To the Editor of The Press:
Sin: Saturday morning, while the ladies were kindly and (as usual with our Philadelphia ladies), Indefatigably attending to their duties, self assumed and attentively carried through with, a printed notice was handed to the chairman of each sub-comand attentively carried through with, a printed notice was handed to the chairman of each sub-committee, requesting in a very peremptory manner that the ladies in attendance would please not make use of the privileges granted them in their season tickets, and not lounge around the picture gallery, floral department, and other places of interest, to the exclusion of other guests!

A very pleasant, kind, and polite way of treating ladies whose, hands, and heads have been busy for months past, working with the strength of as many Hercules early and late. Where, Afr. Chairman, would your Sanitary Fair be if the ladies had been lounging then? Where would it be now if they choose to treat you as you deserve, to leave you to yourself and guests? If you were to ask pardon on your bended knees of them for this insult, it would not be a sufficient explation. You have done a zery generous thing in granting tickets for three dollars to those who have given time and strength to get up this vast and elegant offering to the cause. You have done a truly great thing in addressing those thus benefitted, commanding them not to make use of your kindness. Make another effort to add to your great littleness.

Truly yours,

FAIR. Colored Persons at the Fair. To the Editor of The Press:

Sin: A report is in circulation which has reached my ears, that all colored persons are excluded from visiting the Great Sanitary Fair, except as waiters or laborers. or inborers.

I do not believe that the respectable committee having the Fair in charge would knowingly permit such injustice towards so large and patriotic a class of our citizens, and would thank you, through your columns, to satisfy the public of the truth or falsity of this report, and thereby further the cause of Philadelphia, June 14, 1864.

THE SANITARY COMMISSION VS. GRAYBACKS.
—The following extracts from letters writton by a soldier belonging to the 165th Pennsylvania Regiment, although pretty "rough" in style, are strictly true, and serve to illustrate the character of the relief furnished by the Sanitary Commission to our brave soldiers:

"North Anna, May 26.—What would I give for a change of underelothes! We have never changed clothes since we left the Rapidan; have been in enterchments and rifle-plits ever since, and are torribly annoyed with wood-bugs, graybacks, etc."

The same soldier writes:

"Bettesda Church, June 4.—I got a change of cleng garments from the Sanitary Commission. God bless the Commission! I feel bully now! I can sleep without scratching."

Quarter Sessions—Judge Allison. PICKING THE POCKET OF A JUDGE, AND WHAT CAME

A young man, named David McFarland, was tried yesterday on an indictment charging him with having picked the pocket of Judge Oswald Thompson, of the Court of Gommon Plens. The Judge, it seems, had entered a Fine-treet car on an evening a few weeks since, to proceed to his home. He seated himself, took out his pocket-book, and paid his fare, and in a short,time the car was stopped in front of his residence, when he started for the door. The Judge recognized the defendant as the person who stood at the door, with two or three others on the plutform outside, making it difficult for passengers to get out. The defendant, when the Judge reached the door, crowded unnecessarily close to him, acting apparently in concert with those on the platform. After considerable trouble the Judge finally got off the car, not suspecting in the least, however, that all the crowding and pressing he had been subjected to was for the fine of the defendant and two or three of his companion, and immediately upon the exit of Judge Thompson, arrested the defendant and two or three of his companion, are larged the defendant and two or three of his companion, are larged in the least morning, when the Judge was informed by hir.
