The Lake Side.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

The shadows round the inland sea Are deep'ning into night, Slow up the slopes of Ossippee They chase the lessening light. Tired of the long day's blinding heat, I rest my languid eye, Lake of the Hills ! where cool and sweet The sonset waters lie !

Along the sky, in wavy lines, O'er isle, and beach, and bay, Green belted with eternal pines, The mountains stretch away; Below, the maple masses sleep Where shore with water blends, While midmay on the tranquil deep The evening light descends.

So seemed it when yon hill's red crown, Of old, the Indian trod, And through the sunset air looked down Upon the smile of God. To him of light and shades the laws No forest skeptic taught ; Their living and eternal cause His truer instanct sought.

He saw these mountains in the light Which now across them shines ; This Lake, in summer sonset bright, Walled round with sombering pures God near him seemed ; from earth and skies His loving voice he heard, As face to face in Paradise, Man stood before the Lord

Miss FANTADLING says the first time a young man "sat up with her," she felt as if a sweet brier was climbing her chair, while honey-suckles, so hid the legs of the table, that she thought she was in Paradise regained.

"I cannot imagine," said an alderman "why my whiskers turn grey so much sooner than the hair on my head."

"Because," observed a wag, "you have worked so much harder with your jaws than Musical Instruments, Pictures & Paints, your brains.

house, a farm, or a vineyard, or even a hill that traverse every part of the city in gondolas, large canoes that will hold from five to ten persons.

THE New York Dutchman says : "There is a man connected with one of our theatres whose nose is so large that he has to blow it with a boot-jack." The Dutchman has an extensive imagination, but he don't come up to the ability of the Greek epigrammatist, who tells of a fellow whose nose was so long that he couldn't hear himself sneeze.

SHOES .- Whenever shoes or bools are taken from the feet, it will greatly prolong the upper leather from cracking, if the wearer was to bend back the sole of the shoe on the knee, or the back of a chair, and also pinch up the upper leather; it should be done when warm from the feet. Shoes worn only once a week should be done in this manner every Sunday night. When put on again the next Sunday morning, they will have the feel of a new pair. I was told this by a shoemaker, great saving to my pocket.
