BAISING POTATOES. Ms. Entros:—As the time of planting this esculent root, the potato, is mear at hand, it may not be out of place to make a few remarks on its culture. From my experience in rasing potatoes, I am convinced that the middle planting, as it is called, is the surest of making a good crop. I know that much depends on the weather; if it should happen to be dry at the time the potato vines are in blossom and the potato about forming, we cannot expect much of a crop; but if, planting at a certain season, the rains are more cannot expect much of a crop; but if, planting at a certain season, the rains are more apt to suit the potato, it should be our duty to endeavor to plant our potatoes at that time. I have, however, generally divided my time of planting into three periods; the first, as early in the spring as it will do, sometimes by the first of April, and sometimes later, according as the spring is forward or backward. At this planting, I put in about one-fourth of the patch. The next or middle planting, is done about the 25th of April, at which time I put in one-half of the whole patch; and the last planting is done from the fifth to the tenth of May, when I put in the remaining one-fourth. It someput in the remaining one-fourth. It some-times happens that the first or the last planting turns out the best; in case this happens, I am sure of a part of my crop being good. But as the middle planting is generally better than the others, I plant double the quantity at that time. My rea-sons for making three divisions in the crop are obvious, and I think the best that can As I have now stated my time of planting with my reason for so doing, I will proceed to give you the best manner of planting, &c. A clover sod is superior to any other I have ever tried; and to obtain this, it is best to sew clover with oats, and leave it lay over until the next spring, instead of plowing up the oats stubble and sowing with wheat. The portion of this stubble intended for potatoes, should be enclosed with a temporary fence, and the remaining part may be pastured. Give the clover sed a good coat of manure, or apply four hundred pounds of guano per acre, (the manure is preferable.)— If manure is used, it should be raked in on the potatoes, after they are dropped; if gua-na it may be sprinkled in the furrow, and in both instances plowed under to the depth of four inches. The potatoes should be planted in every second farrow. After the potatees are planted, a good rolling will be of advantage, as it will level the ground, and fill up the small hollows.

When the potatoes are just coming through, the ground should be thoroughly loosened up by using the square harrow on it. As soon by using the square harrow on it. As soon as the potatoes are large enough, not to be covered up, the cultivator should be used, by taking out the two back teeth, and running twice on a row. Continue this every few to pass superficially over any subject. Composition and Declamation will receive particular distributions and Declamation will receive particular distributions. the potatoes, and leaves a furrow between the rows, so that when it rains, the water runs in the furrows, and is thus keeps from the roots of the potato.

If this plan be followed, it is hardly possible to fail having a fair crop. Some plant pumpkins with their potatoes, and raise a considerable quantity of them; but probably it tends to draw the virtue of the soil from the potato.

Another very essential point in the raising of potatoes, successfully, is that of changing the seed every five or six years. They, like almost everything else, follow the course of nature, and degenerate when planted in the same soil for any considerable length of time. In proof of this, I will give one instance, only. A neighbor about ten years ago, was tortunate enough to secure a smooth kind of Mercers, which when first planted yielded very well, so much so, that all the neighbors bought of him and planted. Where they have bought within two or three years, they still raise fine crops, fully equal to when first introduced; while for the last two or three years, he has not had more than balf a crop; therefore, they want changing.

I have already lengthened out this much beyond my intentions when commencing, and will therefore close .- Cor. Ger. Telegraph.

SUCCESSFUL GRAPE CULTURE. Having received several inquiring letters in relation to Mr. McKay's method of cultivating the grape, I have concluded to answer THE LONDON QUARTERLY (Conservative) all through your columns. I should have done it ere this, had I received the following information from Mr. E. A. McKay, of Naples, Ontario county sooner. In an article headed "A profitable acre in western New York," published in your columns last fall, there is a great mistake respecting the quantity produced. Instead of ten tons, the actual yield was a little over 11,one the of grapes on an acre. But this must still be considered a great yield, and a very profitable one. Mr. McKny says that the amount over 10 cents per ib, which he received for his grapes, will pay all the expenses of cultivation, gathering, and getting to market. This would leave $1,100 clear profit,

Said acre was planted in the spring of 1848, one ball with vines one year old, and the remainder with those aged two years— 160 vines to the acre, or a rod rod apart each way. Mr. McKay thinks on a middling steep side hill. 12 feet each way would not be too near. His vines are trained in all cases so as to give them the greatest amount of sunshi For planting, pits were dug from 24 to 3 feet deep and 6 to 8 feet in diameter. At the bottom of the pits he placed, "ten heavy loads of refuse from the currier's shop, and eighty dead oxen," a drove of which had been driven into Naples at the commencement of winter, and a large portion of them having died during the winter and spring. Mr. McKay also uses well rotted barn-yard manure, avoids all fresh and unfermented manures. vines now measure on an average over 12 inches in circumference around the body, nor is there any essential difference in size tween the parts of the vineyard planted with one or two year old vines. They are trained on wire trellises 8 feet high, running nearly north and south. No. 12 iron wire is recommended, with a wooden slat 5 inches wisle 2 feet above the ground, and a similar one along the top of the trollis. He takes no fruit from his vines until the 4th fall after The first year but one the cane or shoot is suffered to grow, and that is cut back 3 or 4 bads from the ground the next winter. The second season two shoots are allowed to grow. The third season, the trellis is built. and the two cames are to three or four feet each in length, and brought down horizontally and fastened with leathers to the slats along the bottom of the trellis. The third season every siterastic bud is allowed to grow, and trained to the slate at the top of the trellis, and strapped here about the first of September. The fourth season, the vines will bear abundantly, but a vine of 3 inches apan (around the body) should only be allowed to hear 3 his of fruit, and he increased to 10 his for every additional inch of girth to any extent. This can be safely done with good culture.

The ground between the rows of vines may

The ground between the rows of vines may be cultivated with any low vegetable or plant desired, which will help defray a large portion of the expenses of cultivation. Mr. Mc. Key also cautions against heeding the advice of auracrymen frequently given, to plant vines as near together as 6 or 8 feet.

Such has been the success of Mr. McKey that his experience must prove acceptable to all those who are about to begin the cultivation of this agreeable and bealthy fruit. If well cultivated, it will pay wall. Nor is there any danger of two many grapes being grown, and the market overstocked, at least for many years, since the demand increases factor than the supple, as all quitivators well door.

The lastelin grape is perfectly hardy in our finals.

Shindel, Esquires. W. McCantr, Esq., Dear Sic :- I received more than a year ago copy of "Reed,s Pleaders' Assistant" improved by Judge Jordan and others. I examined it with some care soon afterwards, and have had occasion to use it several times since. I think it decidedly valuable as a manuel for practising attorneys in Pennsylvania, and do not hesitate to recommend it. If it were generally used it would increase the accuracy of the profession in matters which are often very carelessly done.

I am very truly yours, &c., J. S. BLACK. I also received a copy of the Pleaders' Assist-ant, and have examined it sufficiently to enable me to concur very heartily in the above commen-dations by the Chief Justice.
