Resolutions have been proposed in the House of Commons by Mr. Cardwell, and in the House of Lords by Lord Shaftesbury, censuring the Government for the publication of their dispatch to the Governor General of India in regard to his first proclamation to the people of Oude. The London Times says that the resolu tions censoring the Government will be sup-ported by Lord John Russel and the Peelite party, as well as by the friends of Lord Palmerston. POTTSVILLE, PA., May 22d .- The trouble trict, near this place, has assumed a serious aspect. The workmen struck for higher wages several days ago, alleging that, at the rates received, they could not support their families. As their employers refused to make any concessions, the miners went off in a body to other collieries to obtain higher wages, or compel the other workmen to make the strike a general one. They visited Wadesville and the collieries in that vicinity, and by threats and persuasion, induced the miners to join them. Yesterday, the mob, now grown quite formidable, appeared at St. Clair, and, by their violent demonstrations, stopped operations at Milnes', Johns', Snyder's, and other collieries. The Sheriff's Deputy was on the ground, but was unable to make any arrests, in consequence of the strength of the rioters. The Sheriff of Schuylkill county made a requisition upon the military, and the First Regiment of Volunteers, under the command of Col. Johnson, left for St. Clair at an early hour. The military returned at noon, bringing with them the ringleaders of the riot. Quiet has been re-

Some of our cotemporaries are making various grave commentain relation to the late editorial convention at Philadelphia, which swallowed up, body and breeches, the Danville institution formed last June. We were among those who attended at Danville, in company with our neighbor of the Gazette. The day was warm and oppressive. TRIAL OF MRS. TWIGGS. The trial of Mrs. Mary Twigge for the murder of Mrs. Clark was commenced on Tuesday morning last. On Wednesday evening the Jury retired and on Thursday at 2 o'clock P. M., returned with a verdict guilty,

The American says : After a solemn pause in which no sound was heard save only the subdued sobs of the prisoner, her counsel, E. H. Baldy, Esq., moved for a new trial on the ground that one of the Jurors had expressed his opinion of guilt before entering the Jury box. Witnesses were summoned who testified that they had heard one of the Jurors, to wit: John Crom-ley, declare his belief of the guilt of Mary Twiggs, previous to the trial. Mr. Cromley was sworn, and denied the charge. Upon which the court was adjourned until to-morrow morning at 71 o'clock, when the decision of will be given.

PRIDAY MORNING.

The Court House was crowded to its utmost capacity, when Judge Jerdan delivered the opinion of the Court, adverse to the motion for a new trial, and Mary Twiggs was requested to rise. The Judge in a voice indiwho was auxious to procure the shadows of the body assembled, whether for for its wisdom painful duty before him, enquired if she had aught to say why the sentence of death should not be pronounced upon her. She arose looking the very picture of sorrow but uttered not a word. Then amid the most profound si-

I refrain from making any remarks that might tend to increase your sorrows or spirits, but we have no idea that they can work any great reform in editors who will brove the electrics of the Court this trial and its issue have been most painful. If you have been unjustly condemned, it has not been because, those whose duty it was to pass upon your guilt or innocence, desired your condemnation. The weight of evidence they believed was against you, and demanded from them a verdict of guilty. The Court would most most earnestly recommend and entreat of you, to spend the brief period there probably is, between you and eternity, in pre-paring to meet your final Judge. To him your guilt or innocence is well known.

The sentence of the Court is, that you, Mary Twiggs, be taken bence to the place from whence you came, within the jail of the county of Montour, and from thence to the place of execution, within the walls or yard of the said fuil, and that you there be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul.

Thus ended the trial of Mary Twiggs for the murder of Catharine Ann Clark, and the final tragedy on the scaffold only remains to close a life of misfortune. All that counsel could do was done that legal ability and faithful devotion to her cause could accomplish was invoked in her behalf. In addition to this she was tried before a judge possessed ten miles from home, called Middleburg, of a humane disposition, eminent as a jurist formerly known as Swinefordstown, where he and fair and impartial in his judgment, and evidently under a deep sense of the great responsibility resting upon him.

Upon refusal of Captain B. to hoist his ensign, several shots (blank cartridges) were fired by the steamer, in order to intimidate Captain Bartlett and compel him to hoist his ensign, which he did not do. Captain B then noticed that they had lowered away two of their large boats, each containing about 50 men, with any quantity of small arms, when he (Capt. B.) took his ensign and laid it on the cabin table. Soon after the boats arrived alongside, and the commander of the steamer in person came on board, when Capt. B. received him politely, but protested against the proceedings, and would not allow any of the men to come on board, threatening to shoot the first that attempted it. Capt. B. and the British commander then proceeded to the cabin, when he (the commander of the steamer) commanded him to boist his ensign. He replied, "There it lies upon the table, and if your commission is worth enough, hoist i yourself." The British officer, pistol in hand, commenced pacing the cabin, saying that be would seize the vessel and take her to the port of New York, to which Capt. B. replied that was exactly what he wanted him to do when, whether by intent or accident, Capt. B. was struck on the breast by the hand which held the pistol. Capt. B. then presented his pistol and said—"Sir, keep your hands off me, or I will shoot you." The offi-cer replied—"I did not lay my hands on you," when Captain B. rejoined—"You did, sir." The officer inquired if the sugar on board belonged to Captain B. when he replied—'I never owned a hogshead of sugar in my life." The same question was asked in regard to the launches, (boats for conveying the sugar from the shore on board,) and the same reply given. The officer, completely cowed, proin a perfect rage bellowed forth-"Lower the gangway ladder," when Capt. AT VARIANCE

Senators Cameron and Bigler appear to be singularly at variance in their views of Penasylvania interests and policy. It is not often that the Sepators of any one State maintain such conflicting notions upon great sectional issues, and particularly upon questions affecting the local interests of those they represent. Upon mere political issues it is no uncommon thing to find them adversely arrayed; but when matters pertaing to their own immediate State are involved, they usually been found a unit both in action and thought. It is the misfortune of Pennsylvania to have Senators who not only differ politically, but whose ideas are equally variant as to the interests of her people. On Wednesday last, the Sen-ate had up for the consideration the subject of the windrawal of the fishing bounties, and the release of the duty on salt. Bigler, with his usual temerity, declared himself in favor of the former proposition, and opposed to the latter. This brought down on him the cutting sarcasm of Mr. Seward, from which he did not escape without a scathing. "After floundering about for some time in water too deep for his inches," says a correspondent of the Philadelphia Enquirer "Senator Cameron kindly undertook to relieve him from his awkward dilemma." The remarks of Mr. Cameron, on this occasion, are too good to be lost, and we therefore quote them in full.— Mr. C. said :

"I desire only to say a word in vindication of my colleague, and I think, in justice to him and myself, I should be permitted to say that word, for you know I do not often occu py much of the time of the Senate. It is, that I am satisfied he is acting in accordance with his well known principles. He is I believe, a free trade man, if I can judge him from his acts. I remember that at the close of the last session the reduction of duty on our great staple, iron, was made if not by motion at least by his vote. He agreed to it and was perfectly satisfied with it. The resuit has been to break up every iron master in Pennsylvania who had not an immense fortune beyond his business in trade. Every man who has at all been indebted in his business has been destroyed. The iron business 700 bu of Pennsylvania about which gentlemen speak pounds. here is no longer an interest. No man, unless he has a fortune that be has inherited or obtained from scources beyond his business is capable of conducting a furnace for a day. It may be the policy of my colleague, and If we were to destroy the duty on salt now as proposed by the Senatar from Rhode I beleive that after a little while the salt interests would help the iron interests; and if we take off the sugar duty from gentlemen down in Lousians, I think after a while they will come to our ground; and if we should the gentlemen in the "nigger" interest would paper. colleague. I thought it was due to him coming from my own State, that I should make this explanation." In the language of that fat and funny creation of Shakspeare, the redoubtable Falstaff, Senator Bigler might well exclaim—

"Call you this backing your friends ! for the apology, so good-humoredly made, left him still further involved in his mazy labyrinth. The correspondent from whom we have quoted these remarks, informs us that when Mr. Cameron concluded, the Senate land, was in ectsacies, and Mr. Bigler in a rage.-After tartly informing him that he did not thank him for his vidication, and proclaiming his willingness to face his constitutents on all points of his conduct, he fell back upon the allegation that all our financial difficulty asose om our 'inflated system of paper money,' an attempted to fasten upon Mr. Cameron the responsibility of that 'system.'

After making a most lame argument, be instantly moved an adjourment, and refused peremptorily to withdraw his motion to allow Mr. Cameron to reply to do which. however, there was no necessity. Had he done, so, 1 presume that Mr. Cameron would have renonded that he and Bigler were about equally interested in Bank matters, himself a as lender, and his colleague as a borrower. 'A young man without money, among the ladies is like the moon on a cloudy night-he can't shine." If by money is meant a competance to support a wife respectably, the saying is right.—

A sensible girl would be a great fool to marry a man who hadn't some money-a bigger fool if she held wealth above merit. As a general rule, women are not influenced in heart affairs by pecuniary considerations; too many alas have the light of their youthful days quenched in the tears of untimely suffering for neglecting the very essential item of conjugal felicity -money. - Harrisburg Telegraph.

CHEAP FOOD .- The selling price of eggs is now about ten cents per dozen, less than one cent apiece. At that figure there is no cheap-er article of food in the market. Eggs are more nourishing and more strengthening than meat. A pound of them will cost less than eight cents, with no waste for bone.

ATTACKED BY A CHICKEN.-The Village Record states that a little daughter of Mr. Patrick McCoy of West Chester was severey injured on Saturday last by a game cock. The chicken came out of a yard and attacked her, driving his spur into the neck of the child just below the ear about half an inch deep, and inflicting a wound on the forebead which was cut to the skull, and several other wounds about the face.

MORE LOTTERIES BROKEN UP. SWANN & Co's LOTTERY FOUND TO BE BOGUS Mayor Tieman, and his Aids, of New York some time ago discovered that the lottery called the Sparta Academy, of Swann & Co., Augusta, Georgia, was probably a bogus concern, although claimed to be existing under a law of that State. This concern, with other Southern lotteries, did more injury in New York city than in any other part of the

It will be remembered that after the May or's police broke up a number of policy offices and lottery agencies in that city, Swann & Co., came out with a card of thanks for his vigilance in breaking up the bogus lotteries, and gave the public to understand that their institution, which existed under a law of the State of Georgia, and was consequently genuine, still flourished, and was distributing millions of dollars in prizes. This led to a private investigation, which resulted in Sergeant Berney being sent by the Mayor as a special messenger to the Attorney General of Georgia, to inform him that Swan & Co.'s lottery was a fraudulent concern. Sergt. Berney was well received by the Georgia authorities, who were quite surprised at the discovery, was a "Sparta Academy" lottery, franchised by an act of 1826, but it expired long since. It was apon that Swan & Co.'s enterprise was based. A special grand jury was called in Augusta, on Monday last, and after a short consul-tation bills of indictment were found against the proprietors of the swindling concern. viz: Samuel Swan, of Augusta, and Benj. B. Wood and George P. Eddy, of New York city; also against the bogus commissioners of the lottery, Frederick P. Barber and Leon P. Douglas, and the clerks, James A. Eddy and Charles Losler, Jr.

These parties with the exception of Wood and Eddy, were arrested and held to beil each in $10,000 to answer. There were five indictments against each. The people of Augusta were quite indig-nau; to find that they had so longbeen imposed upon. It is said that most of the Southern lotteries are bogus. Swan & Co.'s receipts were said to amount to $150,000 a week. The authorities of Augusta assured Mr. Berney that they would do all in their power to suppress the lotteries in existence.
