Important from Washington Our Relation with England-The Right of Search still adhered to.

WASHINGTON, June 19 .- Despatches have been received from Mr. Daliss, at the State Daparlment, covering the response of the British government to the letters of Secretary Cass upon the recent searches of American vessels in the Gulf. The pith of these despatches is that, while England disavows all authority for any offensive acts that may have been committed, and while standing ready to make all the reprotion that may be required, she is not, at the same time, willing to abandon the right of visiting all receives that may be surjected of being engaged in the traffic of slaves. In other words, the most effective measures will still be used for its suppression. It is, however, the device of the Briish government that these visits may be made in the most acceptable manner; and to recure this, the English Minister for Foreign Affairs would be pleased to receive such suggestions as the Cabinet of the United States may be disposed to make. The tenor of these despatches being entirely unlooked for has created no little feeling on the part of the President, who, it is confidentir predicted, will insist at once upon the al-an-domment of the position which England asserts her intention of adhering to. In other words, the right of welt will not be conceled by Mr. Buchenan is any shape whatever.
