In the meantime the Laberator of Italy is pursuing his own plans, spearently but little concerned with those menacing complications. He moves the more cautiously, perhaps, from the odds he menacing complications. The moves the more cautiously, perhaps, from the edds he has to contend against, but not the less resolutely. That Austria will undertake to fulfill has to contend against, but not the less resolutely. That Austria will undertake to fulfill has been probable, but if she does so, Italy will again be in arms, fighting against her old foo, without the aid, however, of her recent ally. Napoleon having warned Pendinont to beware providing Austria to hastilities, for, in the event of collision, Prancis assistance could not be recknowd upon, Hungary might give some trouble to Prancis doseph, but he is endeavoring to appeare the popular ciamor there by concessions not usually granted by Anstria.

AUSTRIA AND ITALY

When Louis Napoleon stopped short of fullfilling his promise of restoring the independence and nationality of Italy, and made a pence which left Venetia still in the bands of Austria, he left just such a state of affairs as satisfied the world that trouble would soon ensue and Europe probably be planged again into war. The peace of Villafranca may have been forced upon Napoleon III by the then existing complications dangerous to France, but the results of the peace anight half satisfying the more ardent and sincert frends of Italian freedom, they are now under the heroic Garibaldi, disposed to finish the work by ridding Italy entirely of all influences, atverse to ber unity and nationality—of aribaldi having freed Sicily from her Neapolitan tyrants, first threatens Naples, and then Venetia.
