

THE PRESIDENT ELECT IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Speech of Mr. Lincoln to the People of Allegheny County.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 15. The weather this morning opened unpropitiously, a heavy rain falling up to eight o'clock, when it subsided. During the evening Mr. Lincoln was waited upon by the Pittsburgh Council in a body, and many visitors calling to pay their respects.

In accordance with Mr. Lincoln's invitation to the people of Allegheny county last night, a large crowd gathered this morning in the vicinity of the Monongahela House to hear his speech on the peculiar interests of the country. When he was introduced and advanced to the railing of the balcony, he was greeted with vociferous cheering. Mr. Lincoln then addressed the assemblage as follows:—

Mayor Wilson, and citizens of Pennsylvania— I most cordially thank His Honor, Mayor Wilson and the citizens of Pittsburgh generally, for this flattering reception. It is the more grateful because I know that while it is not given me alone but to the cause I represent, yet it is given under circumstances that clearly prove me that there is a great and sincere feeling at the bottom of it. (Enthusiastic applause.)

And here I may remark, that in every crowd through which I have passed, a large and anxious has been made to the present distracted state of the country.

It is naturally expected that I should say something upon this subject; but if I touch upon it at all, it would involve an elaborate and voluminous treatise. The great number of the questions and circumstances would require more time than I can at present command, and I would perhaps unprofitably commit myself upon matters that have not yet fully developed themselves. (Immense cheering and cries of "Good!" "That's right!")

The condition of the country is an extraordinary one, and fills the mind of every patriotic citizen and politician. My intention is to give this subject all the consideration that I possibly can, before I speak fully and definitely in regard to it. (Cheers.) So that when I do speak I may be as nearly right as possible. (Loud and continued applause.)

When I do speak, I hope I will say nothing in opposition to the spirit of the Constitution, or contrary to the integrity of the Union, or which will prove inimical to the liberties of the people, or to the peace of the whole country. (Vociferous applause.) And furthermore, when the time arrives for me to speak on this great subject, I hope I will say nothing to disappoint the people generally throughout the country, especially if their expectations have been based upon anything which I may have heretofore said. (Applause.)

Notwithstanding the troubles across the river, (the speaker pointing southward to the Monongahela and ending) there is really no crisis, except an artificial one. (Laughter and applause.) What is there now to warrant the condition of affairs presented by our own friends over the river? Take even their own view of the "crisis" involved, there is nothing to justify the course they are pursuing. (A voice—"That's so.")

I repeat, then, that there is no crisis, excepting such as one arising from the action of an artful and turbulent man, aided by designing politicians. My advice, then, under the circumstances, is to keep cool. If the great American people only keep their temper on both sides of the line, the troubles will come to an end, and the question that now divides the country will be settled just as surely as all other difficulties of like character, which have originated in the Government, since they have originated in the people on both sides keep their tempers, and just as other clouds have cleared in due time, so will this, and this great nation continue to prosper as heretofore. (Loud applause.) But fellow citizens, I have spoken longer on this subject than I intended to do, and I shall say no more at present.

Fellow citizens, as this is the first opportunity I have had to address a Pennsylvania assemblage, it seems a fitting time to introduce to you a subject of great magnitude, and one attended with many difficulties, owing to the great variety of interests involved. So long as taxation, for the support of the Government and the maintenance of a tariff is necessary. A tariff to the Government what is to a family? but while it is admitted, it still becomes necessary to modify or change its operation, according as new interests or circumstances arise. So far, there is the difference of opinions among politicians, but the question as to how far interests may be adjusted for the protection of home industry, gives rise to numerous views and subjects. I am not here to take up the platform of any party, but I do not understand that I am in the platform, but I promise you that I will give it my closest attention, and endeavor to comprehend it more fully. And here I may remark that the Chicago platform contains a tariff on this subject, which I think should be regarded as a law for the incoming Administration. (Immense demonstrations of applause.) In fact this question, as well as all other subjects, including the tariff platform, should not be varied from what we gave the people to understand would be our policy when we obtained their votes. (Continued applause.) Permit me, fellow citizens, to read the tariff plank of the Chicago platform, so that you may have it read in your hearing, by one who has younger eyes than I have.

Mr. Lincoln's private secretary then read section twenty-four of the Chicago platform as follows:—"The tariff providing revenue for the support of the Government by duties upon imports, should policy requires such an adjustment of these imports as may encourage the development of the industrial interests of the whole country, and we commend to the national exchanges, which secure to the workingmen liberal wages, to agriculture remunerating prices, to mechanics and manufacturers an adequate reward for their skill, labor and enterprise, and to the nation commercial prosperity and independence."

Mr. Lincoln continued:—Now, I must confess that there are shades of difference in interpreting even this platform, but I am not now intending to give you some general idea of the subject. I have long thought that if there be any article of necessity which can be produced at home, with as little, or nearly the same labor as abroad, it would be better to protect that article of labor at its true standard of value. If a bar of iron got out of the mines of England, and a bar of iron, taken from the mines in Pennsylvania, can be produced at the English bar is shipped from Manchester to Pittsburgh, and the American bar is produced at Pittsburgh, the cost of carriage is appreciably less. [Laughter.] If we had no iron here, there should encourage the shipment from a foreign country. This brings us back to the first proposition, that if any article can be produced at home with nearly the same cost as abroad, the carriage is lost labor. The treasury of the nation in such a case condition at present that this subject now demands the attention of Congress, and will demand the immediate consideration of the new Administration. The tariff bill now pending, the next Congress will pass at the present session. I confess I do not understand the precise provisions of this bill. I do not know whether it can be passed by the present Congress or not, may or may not be the law of the land, but if it does pass, that will be an end of the matter until a modification can be effected, should that be deemed necessary. If it does not pass, and the latest advice I have are to the effect that it is still pending, the next Congress will have to give it the earliest attention. According to my political education, I am inclined to believe that the people in the various sections of the country should have their own views carried out through their representatives in Congress. If the consideration of the tariff bill should be postponed until the next session of the National Legislature, no subject should engage your representatives more closely than that of the tariff. If I have any recommendation to make, it will be that every man who is called upon to serve the people in a representative capacity, should study the whole subject thoroughly, as I intend to do myself, looking to the varied interests of the common country, so that when the time for action arrives to advocate that protection may be extended to the coal and iron of Pennsylvania, the cost of Illinois, and the respect of Chicago. Permit me to express the hope that this important subject may receive such consideration at the hands of your representatives that the interests that no part of the country may be overlooked, but that all sections may share the benefits of a just and equitable tariff. (Applause.) But I am trespassing upon your patience, [cries of "no, no," "go on," "we'll listen,"] and must bring my remarks to a close. Thanking you most cordially for the kind reception you have extended to me, I bid you all adieu. [Enthusiastic applause.]

At the conclusion of the speech, immediate arrangements were made for leaving the hotel, which occupied considerable time, in consequence of the density of the crowd. The procession then moved through several streets, the route being shortened, owing to the previous delay. On arriving at the depot, the solid mass in waiting was almost impenetrable. The enthusiasm manifested exceeded anything ever before witnessed. In a few minutes the special train approached, and the party embarked amid the shouts and cheers of the excited multitude.
