T. BUTLER KING'S LETTER A FORGERY.

What Was to Be Gained By It. COPPERHEAD COMPLICITY. Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune. WASHINGTON, Feb. 15, 1864.

My attention was yesterday called to a letter published in the New York Daily News of the 21st of December, purporting to have been written by T. Butler King, of Georgia, to Robert H. Whitfield, of Virginia.

During last Autumn many of the Rebel leaders became satisfied from their correspondence with prominent Peace men in New York, Ohio, and other States, and from the reports of returned emissaries to the North, that if the Peace leaders were enabled to select the Northern people of strong probability or plausible opinions for the belief, the Seceded States would, upon fair terms return to the Union, the Peace member of the next (present) Federal Congress could, with some prospect of success, offer resolutions to send Commissioners South to propose terms of peace, and the honorable men to whom the letter purports to have been addressed, to declare that he received, or that he ever addressed King a letter to which the one in question purports to be a reply.

THE self-constituted Committee, consisting of Gilmer, B. B. Wellford, Jr., G. W. Lanier of Richmond, and Henry E. Marsh of Savannah, met several times for conference and deliberation in one of the rooms of the War Department, before setting upon any plan of procedure.

Mr. Gilmore, a celebrated, or rather a notorious, lawyer in Richmond, of whom I shall have occasion to speak hereafter, said, "We have nothing to do with ethics—the science of morals must give way to the science of war and politics—we are fighting for a principle—we must beat the enemy, and no matter how we do it, the end will justify the means. Our efforts as civilians politicians to overcome the Yankee deserve to be called 'strategy' as much as the maneuvers of our generals in the field. And if we act boldly and audaciously we can trick the enemy and injure him more than 300,000 men with Gen. Lee at their head could do."

aid of our liberties, should endeavor him to the hearts of the whole people. Such men ought not to be left in idleness at a time like this, the country needs them. By giving to the field every able member of his family, and to the soldier's grave two of the noblest spirits of the revolution," he, too, should be called from his retirement and placed in a position where he can render the greatest good to his country. Let us put our Statesmen in the Council of the Nation, and with wise legislation to embrace and sustain our noble armies, we need have no apprehension of the result.

It was there necessary to give to the appearance of an original and genuine letter, Accordingly a Confederate envelope, embellished with a Jeff. Davis postage stamp, was sent to Stamford, Ga., to receive a post-mark corresponding to the date of the letter. The above plan was selected because one of the committee knew he could make a tool of the Postmaster. Although this was in October, the Postmaster's stamp was altered to the 26th of June. The letter, being now all ready, was handed to Col. Margrave, who was again sent North, the early part of November, and is now, I believe, in Canada.

It will be easy, I am aware, for The News to denounce this statement as untrue; but if the letter is genuine beyond a doubt, as the editor declared in presenting it to readers of The News, and if the assertion is true, it is a matter of some importance. If he did not receive it through Col. Margrave, or some other Rebel how did he obtain it? Let him call on Mr. King to declare that he wrote the letter, or Mr. Whitfield a member of the Rebel Congress from the District of Virginia, to whom the letter purports to have been addressed, to declare that he received, or that he ever addressed King a letter to which the one in question purports to be a reply.

shouted, "Why, you infernal scoundrel, you are drunk!" Upon which, pulling up his horse, and turning round with great gravity, the speaker said: "By gosh! that's a first rightful decision you have given for the last twelvemonth!"

CONCERNING THE PRESIDENT PERSONALLY. Some one was smoking in the presence of the President and complimented him on having no vices, neither drinking nor smoking. "That is a doubtful compliment," answered the President: "I recollect once being outside a stage in Illinois and a man sitting by me offered me a cigar, I told him I had no vices. He said nothing, smoked for some time, and then grunted out, 'It's my experience that folks who no vices have plucked few virtues.'"

SEVERAL LITTLE STORIES.

It would be hardly necessary to inform the nation that our worthy President, in the midst of the anxieties of a state of war that continually tortures his mind, is wont to find occasional relief in an appropriate anecdote or well-turned jest.
