POETICAL.
THE ATLANTIC CABLE.
[From the New York Express.]
Ten thousand years have passed or are past,
While science, like a striding, horse,
The trophies of its hand hath
In various forms from shore to shore,
But now, her latest, mightiest child,
Which Frank's eye viewed on Monte Caron's
With glory ripe and undimmed,
Is laid within the ocean's breast!

TALES & SKETCHES.
THE IRON CROSS.
A WOMAN'S CONFESSION.
A little faded miniature of a young girl in all her freshness. I can scarcely believe that I ever looked like this—I, an old, and woman, who looks longingly to the time when the places I have known shall know no more.

THE IRON CROSS.
A WOMAN'S CONFESSION.
I have been thinking of you, and I have been thinking of the time when I should have the right to carry you over the rugged road along which we must all make our life-journey.

that you love me. You know my prospects and well as I do, and that I have a hard struggle before me, but I will not let my love and hope, I think I can come out of the contest with success. Will you be my wife, Nellie?

"That was unkind, Nellie," he said. But tell me, do you love me? "Yes, my dear, I do. I love you more than I can tell you. I have been thinking of you, and I have been thinking of the time when I should have the right to carry you over the rugged road along which we must all make our life-journey.

Trapping Trout in Florida.
A correspondent gives the following account of a singular method of trapping trout—it is not fishing—which has been introduced in Florida:
I assisted, as the French say, at quite a novel and amusing party, the like of which I never saw or read of before. The scene was a lake, covering about two hundred acres, varying in depth from fifteen to fifty feet, and filled with the most beautiful speckled trout. When the party reached the shore a burly freeman appeared with a huge bucket of goulds on his shoulder. To the end of each of the boats, at the end of which was a hook, baited with a minnow. The freeman pushed off in a little canoe, and flung these goulds broadcast on the face of the lake, and then the guests who were to participate in the sport were invited to embark, each in a canoe propelled by one paddle.

The day was just such a one as would have gladdened the heart of Isaac Walton, and the trout bit greedily. Soon the goulds were bobbing about in every direction, chased by the eager and excited fishermen. The shouts of the boys who were watching the fun from the shore. Down goes a gould with a four-pound trout at the end of it, and away it flies through the water, with a couple of canoes in hot pursuit. The fishermen paddle with all their might, and when one has secured a prize, he throws down their paddles and stretch out their hands to grasp their prize, away goes the gould in another direction, and away go the boats in continued pursuit.

The more knowing and more self-possessed anglers, amid their considerable dexterity, but the novices have only the excitement of the chase without any of the fish.

Rattlesnake Charming Turkeys.
The Bradford Reporter gives us the following snake story:
A very strange and novel occurrence took place on the Sinnemaunong, near Wistaw, Penn., a short time since, which may appear to the reader very snaky; yet its truthfulness can be vouched for by Mr. R. W. McClelland, and others in that vicinity, who were eye witnesses.

The attention of a resident of that place (Mr. McClelland) was attracted to a yard in the rear of his house, where a large flock of turkeys were congregating, uttering wild and discordant cries, and fluttering in the air. Mr. McClelland quickly discovered a huge rattlesnake, coiled up in the act of charming a lordly gobbler of the flock, who was gliding swiftly in a circuit with eye riveted on the glass orbits of his captor, and gradually approaching its venomous jaws.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Romance in Boston.
A few weeks since, a very wealthy Southern gentleman visited Boston to make purchases, and while enrouteing at a prominent hotel, he was struck by a young lady, who was of such a character that it required the skill of an experienced nurse, and such experience was found in the person of a young and comely Irish girl, a domestic in the household of the gentleman. His main duty was to do the work in the hotel, and had during the short time engaged given such satisfaction to her employer that he at once selected her to minister in the sick chamber of his young friend.

"I am sorry for him, Nellie," he said, simply. "If he loves you as I do, I can well imagine how much suffering his loss has cost him."
We went home in silence. I did not see Walter again. In the morning I received a note with only two words—"Forgive me," and in the evening I heard that he had gone away from the village.
