THE TWO ARMIES.

As Life's unending colomn pours,
Two mushalled bests are seen,
Two armies on the trampled shores
That Death flows black between.

The wide-mouthed clarion's bray, And bears upon a crimson scroll, "Our glory is to slay.",

One marches to the drum-beat's roll,

One moves in silence by the stream, With sad, yet watchful eyes. Calm as the patient planet's gleam That walks the clouded skies. Along its front no sabrea shine,

No blood-red persons wave; Its banner bears the single line "Our duty is to save." For those no death-bed's lingering shade; At Honor's trumpet-dall, With kuitted brow and lifted blade in Glory's arms they tall.

For these no clashing falchions bright, No stirring battle-cry; The bloodless stabler calls by night—

Each answers, 'Here am I For these the sculptor's hurciled bust, The builder's marble pites. The authems pealing o'er their dust Through long cathedral aisles.

For these the blossem-sprinkled turf That floods the lonely graves, When Spring rolls in her sea-green surf In flowery-feaming waves.

Two paths lead upward from below, And angels wait above, Who count each burning life-drop's flow, Each falling tear of love.

Though from the hero's bleeding breast Her pulses freedom drew, Though the white hilles in her crest Sprang from that scarlet dew— While valor's haughty champions wait Till all their scars are shown,
Love walks unchallenged through the gate.
To sit beside the throne!

Life in Paris.

A Paris correspondent of the New York Observer gives us this view of life in that wonderful city : How much does it cost to live in Paris? 318:8, Why there is no city in the world where money slips away faster than it does here, but there is no need of spending as much for mere "board and lodging" as in New York or any other American city. I am assured by a resident here, who has made himself perfectly familiar with the ways and means of Paris, that there are many gentlemen, officers under Government, literary men, titled men, and men who move in income is not $500 a year! On this they ters, 15,081 verses, 152,185 words. dress well, pay their rent and buy their food, and often lay up money besides!—

How can they do it? To get an answer, man residing in Amsterdam, 1772, and it I have just mentioned. By going up in the world, to the highest floor of the many dwellings built for tenants, you may get a furnished room for a franc (twenty cents)

There is a Bible in the library of the University of Gottengen written on 5476 palm leaves. a day and even less. In fact many of the stories where the poorest of the poor hire odgings for a few cents per night. But I am speaking only for the respectable class of people with very limited incomes. In the middle of the forenoon, or as I have often seen them, at twelve, noon, and even afterwards, they take their breakfast, consisting of bread and collector common wine. This breakfast may be had at a decent restaurant for five cents, or sous, and it will be as much as a man requires. All over Paris there are restaurants where a full dinner is furnished for 40, or 35, or even 30 cents. For this sum you get a dish of soup, two dishes of theat, bread, a dessert and wine. One man, who was once a butcher, has established several restaurants, in various parts of the city, and is prosecuting the experiment of feeding the greatest possible number at the least cost and a fair profit.— He now entertains ten thousand every day, and at some of his tables a good dinner may be had for less than twenty cents. I have not yet dined at any of these cheap estabishments, but as soon as my courage and appetite are equal to the undertaking, I am going through a system of economical di-eteties, and will make an honest report of the result. And even if we allow our friend with an income of $500 a year to indulge in the luxury of a room at two france, a a dinner at two francs and breakfast at one to Songs of Solomon, inclusive. franc, he is spending only a dollar a day and has plenty left to dress like a prince; that is to dress as a gentleman should .-These figures are higher than were given to me, as the cost of living on a little in Paris, and indeed, I am afraid to put it as low as THE undersigned takes pleasure in announcing to the public of Sunbury, and vicinity, that he has opened his America, his employer asked him if he didn't have it three times a day. "Yis, yur honor, but don't you think I want to be belaved." I want my story to be belayed, and there-fore keep it, within the limits of the truth, And if the family do not wish to resort to a restaurant for dinner, they employ a truiteur, or petty restaurateur, to send them a certain number of dishes at a certain hour of the day, and this arrangement makes it more economical than to provide the same dishes at home. This is creeping into practice in New York, and will become common after awhile. Dinner being over, instead of sitting at their wine, as gentlemen are apt to do at home, they throng the cafes on the Sinal, Boulevards and the brilliant squares of Pear Paris, and, with their collee, or ices, or a "little glass of liquor." pass an hour or two, or three, or more, as the case may be. This custom imparts to Paris an aspect, in the eveing, entirely unique. As we walk the gayest streets at any hour from dusk to midnight, and how much later I do not know, the sidewalks are lined with men and women, few of the latter compared with the number of men, enjoying themselves as if the business of the day were over, and now they would yield themselves to utter aban-don and social enjoyment. It is really cu-rious to see, as we often do, grey-headed and venerable men, who look as if they might be heads of families and heads of good, mingled among a crowd of jolly ban and ends, put together, may form a beautiful work, and chatting, without noise of

We have in our mind a number of noblehearted, good-meaning men, who do not possess strength enough to face opposition. Rather than be called mean they will follow up these habits of drinking until their appetites become uncontrollable. We advise you, young men, when you are in company, and solicited to drink intoxicating liquors, to say frankly and decidedly that you do not indulge in such things, and you command their respect, and they will be forced to admit that your courage is sufficient to bear all their taunts and not yield the right. Those who stem the tide always meet opposition; but never despair-press onward. Our only hope of rescuing the race from this bruta!, slavish passion rests with the young. Will you, young friends, have courage, true, high and God-like courage, to face this growing evil and banish it from our land.

SOMETHING FOR SKATERS. - A contemporary says:

We have a word of advice to young ladies who may go on a skating trip. Don't go with cotton hose and cloth boots, but put on woolen hose and high and heavy leather boots, well lased up to support your ankles and to keep your feet warm; for no others are fit for use with a pair of skates. Go warmly clad, and carry an extra shawl or cloak, and when you cease skating for a few moments, put the extra garment on, and lay it aside when you again commence skating. In this way you will avoid taking cold and war off chills, fever, coughs and other evils paper. arising from over exertion and standing ex-posed to the chilling blasts which sweep across our ponds during the winter months. The next important thing to be attended to, is to get a pair of good fitting skates, that can be securely fastened to the foot without producing pain or stopping the cir-culation of blood, and all this can be secured by a little attention at the beginning. After skating a short time, loosen the straps of the skate; and in case a sensation of numbress is felt, although you may not have been upon the skates but ten minutes, loosen the straps immediately, and allow the blood to circulate freely in the foot, or great injury may arise, perhaps the freezing of the feet. Great care should be exercised in this respect by new beginners. We throw out these brief hints
