SUNBURY, PA.

SATURDAY, MAY 18, 1867. Some good natured persons sometimes ask the meaning of the term "Copperhead," as applied of late years, to certain | ceed politicians. A Copperhead proper, especially an editor, may be known at any time by his want of patriotism during the late rebellion and his poorly disguised hatred of the soldiers who put down the traitors. These even at this day denounce our best and ablest Generals, Grant, Sheridan and others, while they pever fail to eulogise Lee, Albert Sidney Johnson, and other rebel leaders, whenever an opportunity offers.

If any evidence was wanting of these facts. we might refer to an article in the last Northumberland County Democrat, taken from the Lancaster Intelligencer, a professedly democratic paper of strong rebel proclivities, in regard to an enterprise sanctioned by the legislature, for the purpose of erect- is commanded while the Circuit Court is in ing a Soldiers' Home or Asylum for poor and disabled soldiers. The article does not only speak of our officers and soldiers as if they were robbers, thieves, poltroons, blackguards and cowards, but is made up of low than two hundred owing to the limited camake no objections as to the insufficiency vulgar, and indecent allusions, the reading of which no gentleman, who has a proper appreciation of the proprieties of life, would knowingly permit in his family.

CORRESPONDENCE

[Correspondence of the AMERICAN.] Letter from the West.

Friend Wileert : Please continue the "American" to my address, as its visits are always very welcome to me.

Since my last letter to you, business had called me to Woodbine, a new place 30 miles down the Boyer river, in the heart of the Bower valley, and at present a division of the C. & N.-W. R. R. I spent four months there, and the place proved to me a pleasant retreat during the severe winter. Altogether To balance, we had the severest winter I ever endured, the thermometer frequently ranging 20 deg. In all about 76 inches of snow, which afforded one hundred days of good sleighing. This season of snow was interrupted by the most violent storms I ever witnessed, blockading the railroad for ten days at four different times, which made travel and arrival of mails distressingly uncertain. Hardly were the last snowdrifts plowed through when the spring freshet came in dreadful violence and swept the whole valley, taking in its irresistible course miles and miles of track. This occurred when the first rush of travel westward was at its beight, causing an untold amount of disappointment and inconvenience to emigrants. Scores of men | were seen with satchels in hand, going the distance from Montana to the Bluffs, 150 miles on foot. These misfortunes, together with the very pressed new comers, but since the fair weather has opened the tide of emigration comes moving on ; train after train loaded To amount of Bounty Tax Duplicate, Oct.
