"Hung himself." he heard Mrs. Stanbope repeat, as she walked leisurely up stairs, "He hasn't and head another and hearth the start

THE COUNTRY'S PERIL

Speech of Ben. Wade at Cleveland,

Senator Wade spoke at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 10th inst., according to appointment. A large meeting listened to him. He began by saying that in his judgement no more important crisis in the history of our Government had ever existed than the present. The speaker assured the people that as great peril exists to day as when armed rebels struck at the life of the Republic, and ardently appealed to those who saved the nation by their valor then, to rally to its salvation. No one could say he had been an alarmist. During the war he had never doubted our ultimate success ; but the machinations of the present enemies of the reoublic do not arrest the attention, as did he clamors of war, and are so much the more dangerous for that reason. He referand to the fast that the rebel leaders show on signs of repeatence, but are ready to try egain when opportunity offers. He spoke "She seems the kind of woman to go to a of the Congressional Committee which in vestigated the temper and disposition of the South, and concluded that the rebellion is as rife as at any time during the war.

He said in reference to that state of feeling: "The danger lies in the fact, that standing back of those who got up and carried on the rebellion was a large organized party at the North, whose sympathies were with them, and who gave them all the aid and comfort in their power. I will even say that were it not for the sympathy of the Democratic party, there would never have been a rebellion. I knew this better than you, who were at home. For day after day I was in close council with Jeff. Davis, Toombs, Benjamin, Hunter, Crittenden, and others of minor note. In that room, where there were none to take notes for publication, all talked familiarly together, and the plans and purposes of the South were openly avowed. We told them that they

If war carries, "You shall see Mary." My pen draws a veil over the sanctity of said Davis, the blow will fall upon you, and this meeting. No one was present but a wounded comrade who occupied an adjoinnot upon us. The North, and not the South, will be devastated. If it comes to that, the ing cot. He removed the pretity hand, saying: if any attempt was made to coerce the South, the armies of the Government must march over the dead bodies of the Democracy. These he flaunted in my face, and told me that even my own State would join with them. I recollect the reply that I made to him. The Democracy of the North, like the Devil, will lead you into the scrape, and then leave you there. [Great laughter.] When it comes to the clash of arms, not one of them will dare to raise his and in the cause of rebellion. Mrs. Stanhope, thinking this must of course be a ghostly exclamation, uttered a wild scream, and attempted to escape down the narrow staircase. Felix, starting from his place of concealment, gave chase.
