The pure, the bright, the beautiful
That stirred our hearts in youth,
The impulse to a worldly prayer,
The dreams of love and truth:
Tho longing after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry:
The striving after better hopes—
These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to all A brother in his need,
The kindly lord in grief's dark hour.
That proves a friend indeed;
The plea for mercy softly breathed.
When justice threatens nigh;
The sorrow of a contrite heart—
These things shall never die.

The memory of a clasping hand,
The pressure of a kiss,
And all the trifles sweet and frail
That make up love's first bliss;
If with a firm, unchanging faith,
And holy trust and high
Those hands have clasped, these lips have met.
These things shall never die. The memory of a clasping hand,

The cruel and the bitter word

The cruel and the bitter word
That wounded as it fell,
The chilly want of sympathy
We feel but never tell;
The hard repulse that chills the heart,
Whose hopes were bounding high,
In au unfading record kept—
These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand

Within the environs of the quaint old borough of Port Carbon, resides and subsists an honest Teuton of about 27 years of age, who, like all the rest of mankind, loved the fair sex. He fell in love with a handsome Kattarina and wooed her. By industry and fraugality he made for himself a comfortable home, and had got a young and flourishing family of three children, ranging from 12 months to six years, under way, and the neighbors thought everything was moving along quietly undry the Teutonic roof, and we believe it was, until Jimmy the Fiddler made his deput in Port Carbon society. Jimmy and Kattarina met (we don't know whether it was at a ball or a church) and, as the story at a ball or a church) and, as the story goes, fell in love with each other —Jimmy declaring that he loved her like rare beef (Jimmy is an Englisman), and Kattarina declaring she loved Jimmy like sauer kraut. No one dare deny there being love—true love—there. Jimmy's visits were frequent and annoying to the husband, but they were not to be endured forever. One day the honest Teuton accosted Jimmy with questions :

"Would you like to marry my wife ?" Jimmy was stunned, but recovering his self-possession replied:

"Would you have no objections?"
"Certainly not. You may have her and and I will give you money to go and get married, yet, in the barggain." "And a paper to show the Squire you have given your consent?" "Yes," replied the husband.

"It's a bargain," cried Jimmy, elated with the turn things had taken.
Kattarina was informed of all that occurred and she too was agreed.

proceed to the place designated.

The agents went in consequence, to the Sacro-Ritiro a la Lungara, where the theologian lived (it being also the bishop's residence), and having seized him placed him in a carriage. But the Armenian made a desperate struggle, and succeeded at length in throwing himself out of the vehicle, after which he ran back to his house, and the agents, who followed, were deterred from a fresh seizure by the protest of the bishop himself. Another fact is more serious. An apostolic visit had been ordered to the convent of the Armenians called Anronines, under the colonnade of the Vatican; but the bishop refused to receive the visitor, on which the Pope ordered Mgr. Ksagian to proceed from St. Sabine to the Dominicans to perform there religious exercises. But the bishop persisted in his refusal, and he has written to Mgr. Place, Bishop of Marseilles, to claim the protection of France against the Holy Father.

Kelley, who had acquired the name of the "Arizona Rufflan," was then arrested by some of the inhabitants of the city nam-ed who wreaked their vengeance on blin. They carried him into a wood some distages from the city, where they tied one of a rope to the limb of a tree, and to the other fastened Kelley by the hoels so that his head hung within a few feet of the ground. They then built a slow fire under him and allowed him to remain supercharge. him and allowed him to remain suspended until death put end to his existence.

"MARY MYRTLE" comes down in the "MARY MYRTLE" comes down in the following style upon those bashful swains who dawdie and dangle, and wear out the girls' patience and good clothes, make a protracted meeting of their haleyon days, and never summon courage sufficient to pop the question and then question Pop:

If there is anything more disheartening to a woman than a long courtship I have yet to discover it. From the woman who marries for a home—and there are far too many who do that—to the fiir creature who marries for love, there are thousands

We again call upon the consumers of coal abroad to not to submit to high prices—there is no necessity for it. The market can be supplied even with the Schuylkill and Shamokin Regions almost entirely suspended in sending coal towards the seabourd for several weeks yet. If the whole trade were to start now, coal would go down to $2 a ton, in less than a week, in the present state of business, and this would be followed by another suspension after running for two or three weeks, because no person could pay last year's basis wages and sell coal at less than $3 a ton.
