

If I would watch the trunks, and not let them go without giving the information, he would pay me any amount; he said I'm not of age myself; but I'll pledge my word to you it shall be complied with; I told him no pay would be required; to go to Bloodgood's, get a night's rest, and leave the trunks to me; after a good deal of persuasion, by the aid of his friends, and after exacting a pledge of me repeatedly, I got him into a cab and down to Bloodgood's; I saw no more of him till I saw him here yesterday; I was several times near enough to take his breath; not the slightest appearance of liquor about him.

Cross Examined.—Davis, the watchman, came and told me there was a young man in 5th st. acting in such a manner that he did not know what to make of it; (detailed his conversation with Davis); I was in led at my station house when Davis came for me.

Thoughts on Love.

There are many kinds of love, and the passion, whether it be called love, friendship, gratitude, or esteem, seems to be as natural to humankind as any of the other propensities of the mind. The love which children bear towards their parents and near relatives, arises, probably, from gratitude. Parents are continually bestowing favors upon their offspring, from their youth up, and supplying their every want. Hence, the cause of that devoted attachment which children manifest towards their parents.

Friendship has frequently proved so strong as to cause one friend to lay down his life for another. But there is no kind of love so interesting to contemplate, and so strange in the phenomena it exhibits, as the love which exists between the sexes. It may be an animal feeling, at first, in many cases. But, on acquaintance, these subside, and give place to such as are more pure and exalted. Upon reflection, no one can doubt but that there does often exist pure affection, that "regarding the mind only, and its excellencies." Though it is impossible that there can be Platonic Love "at first sight," yet, as soon as one is intimately acquainted with the object of his affections, may he not become entirely enamoured with her mental perfections? This conclusion is reasonable. That there can be a second love as pure as the first is impossible. Let this flame be true and sincere, and time, nor space, nor absence, can entirely efface it from the memory. It may be forgotten for awhile; but there are moments when the mind will, involuntarily, recur to what it once held most dear, and indulge in melancholy reflections which carry the conviction that one has been dearer than all others. How mysterious the sentiment that fastens mind to mind so strongly that the lover holds not the faults of his mistress, or looks upon them with prejudiced eyes, and in the same manner as he views his own failings. They appear to him as pardonable, or even lovely. Self love induces one to esteem in himself, on the whole, a little better than others, and he regards many of his faults as real virtues.

Love makes him view his beloved in the same partial light. This has always been the case, and, no doubt, it is a happy thing for mankind that it is so. It requires much perseverance, and many mental struggles, to resist and discredit all the insinuations thrown out, by friends, to the prejudice of the loved one. Hence, this peculiarity of the mind, this proneness to overlook faults, keeps the lover from losing confidence in his beloved, without just cause. It prevents too much reliance being placed upon the reports of meddlers and interested friends. This blind confiding love, viewed in all the situations of life, is one of the most noble traits of human nature. What a strong feeling it is that induces a young lady to leave a comfortable home, kind parents, and affectionate brothers and sisters, and, frequently, all the conveniences of life, for the sake of the one she adores! Though he proves himself unworthy such ardent attachment, we find her still willing to follow his fortunes, and to attend him in health or sickness, in wealth or poverty, through good report and evil report. The wife of the inebriate often proves herself an angel. She possesses love too pure for earth, and a brute must that man be regarded, who can be insensible to such devoted attachment! The more he abuses and tramples upon the partner of his life, the more she seems to overlook his failings and his cruelties. She is the last one to abandon him.

Enough has been written on love, Platonic Love, love at first sight, first, second, and third love, love after marriage, towards parents, friends and relations, to fill volumes. It is a most prolific subject for conversation, and always excites an interest. When the conversation becomes inviolate, broach this subject, and all will instantly arouse from their lethargy, "prick up their ears," and show signs of returning animation. A. C. Sunbury, March 29, 1843.

Little minds endeavor to support a consequence by distance and hauteur. But this is a mistake. True dignity arises from condescension, and is supported by noble actions. Superciliousness is almost a certain mark of low birth and ill-breeding.

Dahlias are like the most beautiful women without intellectuality; they strike you with astonishment at their splendid exterior, but are miserably destitute of those properties which distinguish and render agreeable less imposing flowers.

When religion is made a science; there is nothing more intricate—when it is made a duty, there is nothing easier.

TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS,

A New Discovery in the NEWSPAPER BUSINESS.
A MOST important and invaluable discovery has been made by a gentleman of this city, by which newspapers may be printed in their present form, and, at the same time, capable of being converted at pleasure into a Magazine form, for preservation.
This grand improvement, which is destined to form a new era in the business, effecting an entire revolution in the art of printing mammoth newspapers, will be introduced, by permission of the patentee, into the Philadelphia Saturday Museum, commencing in May next.
"IMPROVEMENTS IN THE MUSEUM."
"The Museum" is now so fairly and firmly established, that we feel warranted in making some very extensive and important improvements. By the first of May, we shall have completed all our arrangements. We shall have, in the first place, a beautiful, clear and bold type—in the second, a superb-smooth and white paper—in the third place, we shall make an ingenious, and novel change in the arrangement of the matter—in the fourth place, we shall increase our corps of contributors in all the various departments of a Family Newspaper—in the fifth place, we have secured, at a high salary, the services of EDGAR A. FOX, Esq., a gentleman whose high and versatile abilities have always spoken promptly for themselves, and who, after the first of May, will aid us in the editorial conduct of the journal.
The "Narrative of Townsend's Journey over the Rocky Mountains," one of the most interesting and valuable ever published, is sent to all new subscribers. At its conclusion, our readers will find themselves in possession of a work which alone will be worth double the subscription to the paper. We shall continue, also, of course, the "Biographical Sketches and Portraits," which are now exciting so unexampled an interest. With these and other features continued, and with the improvements in contemplation, it remains to be seen whether we do not amply fulfil our determination of making the very best newspaper in America.
Persons wishing to secure six thousand large octavo pages of useful, interesting, and unexceptionable reading for the select family circle, for the small sum of Two Dollars per year—being at the astonishingly low rate of thirty pages for one cent, or equivalent to one hundred and twenty pages for four cents—should hand their names in now.
TERMS—Two Dollars per annum. Three copies for Five Dollars, or sixteen copies for Twenty Dollars, is the extra indulgence offered at present for clubbing. THOMAS C. CLARK & C., Office of the Saturday Museum, Publishers' Hall, No. 101 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia.

GOOD NEWS FOR AMERICAN YOUTH!

A NEW VOLUME OF
ROBERT MERRY'S MUSEUM.
Edited by S. G. Goodrich, author of Peter Parley's Tales. Commencing January, 1843.
SINCE the commencement of this work—now the most popular juvenile periodical extant—it has ever been the aim of the publishers to make it deserving of the liberal encouragement which has been extended towards it; and its subscription list evinces that their efforts have been appreciated by the public.
On the first day of January a new volume will commence. The character of the work will not be changed. Its design will remain the same, and the publishers would assure their patrons and the public that their efforts will be increasing to render it worthy of being a companion for the young. To plant the seeds of morality and truth in the youthful heart, to inculcate virtuous principles and motives into the mind, to aid in the formation of character, to cultivate a taste for knowledge and improvement, and with instruction to blend pleasure and amusement—these have been, and will continue to be, the end and aim of the work. Every article will be thoroughly digested before it is admitted into this work, and great care will be taken that it shall not contain anything inconsistent with the object in view. It is designed to be, not interesting for the moment only, but of permanent value, and fit to form part of every FAMILY LIBRARY.
Some of the leading features of the Museum are History, Geography, Geology, Natural History, Zoology, &c. These will be accompanied with lighter matter in the form of Fables, Sketches, Adventures by Sea and Land, Narratives, Reminiscences, Occurrences, Anecdotes, Fables, Allegories, &c. Poetry and Music will be called in to assist. Every available means of rendering the work sprightly, instructive and entertaining, will be put in requisition. Numerous and splendid engravings and illustrations, surpassing what may be found in any other work of the kind, in this respect, will be inserted; and the topographical appearance of the Museum will be such as, it is believed, will meet the approbation of its patrons. The publishers would add, that Merry's Museum is the cheapest periodical of the kind published in any part of the world: the annual volume containing nearly as much matter as two volumes of Bancroft's History, which sell for four dollars and fifty cents.
THE BEST LATEST TERMS.—One copy, $1; Six copies, $5; Thirteen copies, $10.
The great expense incurred in getting out a work like the Museum, renders it necessary that the publishers should strictly adhere to the cash system. All orders must be paid for, and addressed to the Publishers and Proprietors,
