Anheuser-Busch, maker of popular Budweiser beer, plans to give a shot at becoming as popular worldwide as Coca-Cola, Marlboro, and Levis. Faced with slumping U.S. revenues, Anheuser has taken a $477 million stake in Mexico's biggest brewer, Grupo Modelo, makers of Corona beer and has an $80 million venture with Japan's largest brewer, Kirin Brewery, to distribute Budweiser in Japan.

A questionnaire on sexual harassment published in Seventeen magazine in September 1992 found sexual harassment "rampant in elementary and secondary schools." More than 4,200 female students in grades 2 through 12 responded and findings, released Wednesday, included: 39% reported being harassed at school every day last year, another 29% said it happened last week; in more than two-thirds of the incidents, others witnessed the harassment; 4% reported the incident to a teacher, administrator, or other school staff member, of those reported, 55% of the cases were acted upon by the school; 89% reported sexual comments, gestures; and 83% reported being touched or grabbed.

Next month's summit between President Clinton and Boris Yeltsin may be moved to Moscow, a senior Russian official said Tuesday. The summit is now scheduled for April 3-4 in Vancouver, British Columbia. Some of Yeltsin supporters now worry that the Russian president's opponents would take advantage of his absence to oust him as part of the current struggle between Yeltsin and Parliament. Clinton has said that the United States will continue to support Yeltsin and will offer "an aggressive and quite specific plan" of aid for Russia at the summit.

Killings involving teenagers and guns have gone up 16% since 1989, reveals a study released by the Centers for Disease Control. Says Health and Human Services Donna Shalala, "It is frightening and intolerable to see this waste of young lives." In 1990, 4,173 teens were shot to death. Other findings include: 25% of all deaths from ages 15 to 24 were from shootings, black males were shot to death five times more often than white males; leading cause of death for black males 10 to 34: bullets; 39% more teenagers died from gunshots than disease; and white teenagers have the fastest growing death rate, up 24% a year from 1988-1990.

In Washington, Pa., a murder suspect, William Kingan, told police he repeatedly stabbed his roommate with a meat fork and steak knife because "he wouldn't die." Police found Clarence Aurand, 53, who was mute, lying in bed with the fork sticking out of his chest and 12 other stab wounds. Kingan, 43, told police that he jumped on Aurand, trying to kill him. Aurand died the next day at Allegheny General Hospital in Pittsburgh. "I couldn't put up with him anymore," Kingan said.

Cult leader, David Koresh of the Branch Davidians, has rejected an offer for a national radio pulpit if he ended the nearly month long standoff with federal agents in Waco, Texas. The FBI offered Koresh access to the Christian Broadcasting Network at the time of his surrender but the noon Tuesday deadline for Koresh to accept the deal passed without word from inside the Mount Carmel compound. Since the standoff began February 28 in a bloody gun battle, Koresh claims to have 78 adults and 17 children--all whom he claims as his own biological or adopted children--remaining in the compound.

Seven months after Hurricane Andrew, the children of Dade County, Florida are haunted. In the past two months more than a dozen elementary school youngsters have tried to kill themselves. A countywide alert has been prompted by the suicide attempts, from a second-grader who tried to strangle himself to a 7-year-old who leapt from a school balcony. Fear and stress are common among children surviving natural disasters, but the suicide attempts imong youngsters in Dade County are still shocking. Local experts see a number of possible reasons, from financial hard times
