

Brilliant story of courage and inspiration detailed in Spielberg's "Schindler's List"

by Jen Dugan

Although there have been many documentaries of the Holocaust, you'll never see one like this.

"Schindler's List" was one of the best movies I have ever seen. It is the winner of six Golden Globe awards, including best picture and best director (Steven Spielberg).

It is the true story of Oscar Schindler (Liam Neeson), a rather selfish, wealthy business man. He sets up a factory during the war and hires all Jewish workers because he can pay them less. He hires an accountant, Herr Stern (Ralph Fiennes), who develops a close relationship with Schindler.

Oscar Schindler experiences the atrocities of the acts against the Jews first-hand. (They are shown graphically.) It pushes him to use his power and factory to save at least some of the victims. Often, he must use his wealth to bribe the Nazis.

"Schindler's List" is a black and white, 3 1/2 hour long film. Both of these qualities are needed. The story remains interesting throughout the movie. The black and white effect adds to the authenticity of the picture.

Not only are the directing and acting excellent, but also the story is a very moving. I encourage everyone to see this five star film.

The underdog comes out on top in "Iron Will"

Would you race over 1,000 miles in the freezing cold on a dog sled for $10,000 dollars? Well, Will Stoneman, played by McKenzie Astin, surely did.

This 17-year-old boy is full of strength and spirit, but his character needs to be more expressive and emotional than what is portrayed on the screen.

Will's determination is focused on going to college and saving the family farm. His father died in a tragic accident and his mother needs to keep the college money in order to keep the farm they worked so hard for.

So what did he do? He applied for the race of the century called the "St. Paul Dog Derby." They travel from Winnipeg, Canada to St. Paul, Minnesota where everyone stands attentively at the finish line and waits to see who's going to win.

Many of the riders are experienced foreigners with years of training. Will is the underdog, but that doesn't flatten his spirits, it only makes him more confident and willing.

The race is sponsored by J.W. Harper played by Jeffrey Allen Chandler. The newspapers do a great job of documenting everything that Will goes through. The obstacles Will encounters and the evil doings of the other riders sometimes makes him want to give up, but with the power in his soul and strong heart, he beats all the odds.

The story is very inspirational and touching, but the acting isn't that great. The overall performances don't live up to the plot's standards. Besides that, this film is definitely for a family night out at the movies.

From the tragic beginning to the exciting the end, "Iron Will" is one of Walt Disney's most touching movies ever.

"Creep" to buy Lethal Injection

Lethal Injection by Ice Cube starts out with a man named "Mr. White" getting a "shot" by Ice Cube. This CD is the newest release from the executor of Lench Mob Music.

Since this 60 minute compact disk is produced by a variety of rappers and writers it doesn't have the "problem" that most music tends to have these days of every song sounding the same.

It contains samples from the Pointer Sisters, Slick Rick, Evelyn Champagne King, George Clinton, and Doug E. Fresh.

A few of my favorite songs on the CD are: "You Know How We Do It, Cave B***h, Make It Ruff Make It Smooth, Enemy, What Can I Do?, Down for Whatever, When I Get to Heaven, and of course One Nation.

Although "One Nation" is 11 minutes long, it is enjoyable because it is a blast from the past with its catchy sounds, words, and bass groove.

As with any tape, CD, or record, there are songs that are just not liked or that just don't catch your ear. The good thing about this CD is there is only one or two of these.

This long awaited, much anticipated CD is well worth the $13.00 that was spent on it. As Ice Cube says in "Down for Whatever," it makes you want to "creep" to the store and buy it.
