

Baseball fans head to the theaters, not the fields

by Megan Dearth
Collegian Staff

No movie could have better timing for baseball fans. "The Scout," the latest comedy to hit the box office, fills the space of the early ended baseball season.

Al Percolo (Albert Brooks), a scout for the New York Yankees, finds himself searching hopelessly for a baseball player deep in Central America.

After weeks, he discovers Steve Nebraska (Brendan Fraser) and realizes that Steve just might be the greatest baseball player who ever lived.

Before discovering Steve, Al is fired by the Yankees. This leaves Al as Steve's free agent.

Throughout the movie, a trusting, childlike Steve looks to Al as his father-figure but most of all his friend.

The Yankees return into Al's life when they sign Steve to upcoming year's roster. Steve signs under one condition. He won't play next season unless the Yankees win the pennant.

Of course, the Yankees win and the nervous Steve must play in the first game of the World Series.

At the onset of the game, Steve begins to have doubts about playing. Hiding out, Steve is found by Al. Al steps out of his role as an agent and talks to Steve as a friend.

With confidence, Steve returns to the field for his dramatic entrance.

Since you can't go out to the ballpark, take a seat at the theater and enjoy "The Scout."

Brendan Fraser is Steve Nebraska in Twentieth Century Fox's latest comedy release, "The Scout." Fraser shares the screen with veteran actor Albert Brooks in this touching story about baseball and friendship.

Clear and present success at the box office

by Portia Kelly
Collegian Staff

What do you get when you put Harrison Ford, a plethora of great actors, and a dynamic plot together?

The blockbuster hit, "Clear and Present Danger."

In the third sequel of the "Hunt of Red October" and "Patriot Games," Ford returns in his role as Dr. Jack Ryan, a CIA specialist. Anne Archer also returns in her role as Ryan's wife.

In this sequel, Ryan takes over for the head of CIA relations, Admiral McGreer (James Earl Jones), who is diagnosed with pancreatic cancer. Ryan's first job is to consult with the President of the United States regarding the conspiracy of the drug cartels in Colombia.

Ryan is kept in the dark by fellow colleagues when they send a secret military force to Colombia. Headed by Lt. Clark (William DeFoe), a former American soldier, this party is sent to Colombia to brutally assassinate the top drug lords and destroy their shipments.

As Ryan finds out more about this classified conspiracy, he is drawn deeper and deeper into a death trap.

The climax occurs when Ryan and Clark return to Colombia to rescue the lost military party.

This film is dramatic and full of action and suspense. The actors give top performances and the plot is well developed.

This movie lives up to its predecessors and is a definite must-see for this fall. Don't wait for it to come out on video; catch it now before it leaves the theaters.

DRUNK DRIVING DOESN'T JUST KILL DRUNK DRIVERS.

Nicholas Esposito, killed Oct. 13, 1989 at 8:25pm.

Next time your friend insists on driving drunk, do whatever it takes to stop him. Because if he kills innocent people, how will you live with yourself?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

"CONGRATS!"

Congratulations to Sarah Melchiorre!

Behrend's 1994
Homecoming Queen

Love,
The Sisters of Theta Phi Alpha
ΘΦΑ ΘΦΑ ΘΦΑ ΘΦΑ ΘΦΑ ΘΦΑ ΘΦΑ

Forget sports!
Turn back
a page.

Don't miss Dave Barry's comical view of the world