

The Baltimore Browns?

Is Cleveland owner Art Modell at fault?

I think this could start a domino effect in the NFL. The Browns were considered to be a well established team and now they have moved to a different city. Could Houston be next? Maybe Cincinnati or Seattle. Owners now could be quick to pull the trigger to move a team out of a city with great fans like the Dawg Pound in Cleveland

- Nick Zulovich, Sports Editor; Bears

I've never been a big fan of Cleveland, but I find myself feeling very sorry for Cleveland and the fans. Being a Pittsburgh fan, this concerns me greatly. I strongly disagree with this move, but this just goes to show that football is now a business, and no longer a sport. I hope the Steeler and Brown rivalry remains one of the strongest in the NFL, but I'm starting to have my doubts.

-Julie Stocker, Assistant Sports Editor, Steelers

It's a crock and a half. Art Modell has always been a stupid owner. It started when he got rid of Schottenheimer and it is just a second step in a sad saga. Modell has really angered the fans of Cleveland and he will regret it dearly. Let's just say he better not come to Cleveland when there is snow on the ground.

Any Questions?

- Brian Gregory- Cowboys

I don't like it. It's unfair and Modell is cheating the fans. He's milking the whole situation for more money.

- Jason Mika- 49ers

I think its dumb. I think that once a team's in place it should stay there.

- Bobby Williams- Dolphins

I don't think it's right. They should stay in Cleveland.

- Ron Coup- Jaguars

I think taking a team away from a town with the most loyal fans in the nation is like taking candy from a baby.

- Ed Haft- Giants

I think its bad for the city of Cleveland. The fans will be hurt because they have showed they can support a team like having the "Dawg Pound."

- Matt Kincak- Steelers

Hayden gets fried by angry fan

by Chris Salder
The Daily Iowan

IOWA CITY, Iowa--One of his assistant coaches was nailed by a beer can during a recent football game, and University of Iowa football coach Hayden Fry said if Kinnick Stadium can ban students from smoking and drinking, being an idiot should also be against the rules.

Fry said if he was ever hit by a beer can--like defensive ends coach Milan Vooletich was during the Penn State game--he wouldn't hesitate to leave the sidelines and find out who threw it.

"I imagine if I ever got hit by a beer can, I'd probably want to go up in the stand and offer the beer right back in their mouth," he said in his weekly press conference.

Fry said the UI simply needs "to put its foot down."

"We've got 'no drinking' rules and 'no smoking' in certain places," he said. "Why can't we stop people from being idiots?" Phillip Jones, Iowa's dean of students, said administrative, athletic and facilities officials are reviewing Kinnick Stadium guidelines "from top to bottom" and that changes are likely before Iowa's next home game.

"Last Saturday was especially bad," Jones said. "I was most alarmed about it."

"It's too bad a few rambunctious Hawks ruin the image of Iowa fans as a whole," Fry said.

"It hurts our image," he said.

"It's national TV or regional TV, and it's going across to people who've never been to Iowa in their life, and they get the image that we're all a bunch of clucks."

Jones said it would be wrong to offer a blanket indictment against the student section in the northwest corner of the stadium.

"I think it's a little broader than that, although I'm clear that the students have to become much more responsible in their behavior," Jones said.

"I am concerned about how the stuff got in the stadium in the first place," he said. "It isn't so much catching the person; it's keeping the stuff from going in."

"That's the real thing that I've got to investigate and figure out; just why are the rules we have not working?"

To me, it's just a disgrace.
-Coach Hayden Fry

After Saturday's game, one Big Ten official told UI Sports Information Director Phil Haddy that the UI's student section is the "unruliest in the conference." The Hawkeyes were defeated 41-27 by Penn State amidst showers of marshmallows, alcohol containers and raw meat.

One official narrowly missed being hit in the head by a bottle.

"It's really gotten dangerous," Fry said. "The officials came over to me and said a full whiskey bottle had been thrown out. They were telling me the different things that have been thrown out on the field, and you've got photographers, journalists, our players, coaches, a lot of people on the sidelines that could get wounded."

"To me, it's just disgraceful."

So what can be done about those wild students?

"Lock 'em up," Fry said as his suggestion for what should be done to those caught throwing objects on the field. "It's all uncalled for. The police need to come down on 'em. Lock their tails up."

While Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman said he didn't notice much being thrown onto the field, he said the overall level of fan support helped the team.

"Our students were ready to go and that just always takes us to another level," he said. "It helps us a lot more than people know."
