

Film Series debuts with Hombre

by Sara Prosser
Collegian Staff

The International Film Series will make its annual debut Monday, October 21 in the Reed Lecture Hall. Don't start running for the nearest exit quite yet.

First imagine a science fiction/drama that is a cross between the movies E.T., Phenomenon, and the television show Mork and Mindy.

The first of a series of four International Films is titled Hombre Mirando Al Sudeste (Man Facing Southeast), a film from Argentina.

The story revolves around a mental asylum psychiatrist, Dr. Dennis (Lorenzo Quinteros) and Rantes (Hugo Soto), who mysteriously shows up in the asylum one day.

Rantes is very intelligent, and has many extraordinary gifts. However, Rantes claims that he is a being from another planet. He spends countless hours facing Southeast claiming that he receives messages from his home planet.

Rantes says that he is on a mission of some type, which at first is not quite clear. Eventually, unfolds that he has some type of connection and influence on the other patients at the hospital.

This mysterious connection upsets the authorities at the asylum. Dr. Dennis, who has become friends with Rantes, is ordered to take drastic measures to counteract his "delirious state."

Hombre Mirando Al Sudeste is a story about distinguishing, between what is thought to be "normal" and what isn't. The movie leaves many unanswered questions on the screen as well as in the mind of the viewer.

Was Rantes crazy, or was he really a being from another planet? Is psychiatry a reliable science, or is it not credible at all? These questions can only be answered in the minds of the audience.

So why not come to Reed Lecture Hall on Monday Night and see what this film is all about. The showing starts at 7:30pm and is free.

Other films that are scheduled as part of the series include: Ay, Carmela! to be shown on October 28, Yo, La Peor de Toda (I, the Worst of All) to be shown on November 4, and Valentina to be shown on November 11.

Get A life, Get a Pet!

by Eric Saraceno
Collegian Staff

Want excitement? Want to be loved? Want to buy that high-tech pooper-scooper? If so, get a pet. Yes, those cute and furry creatures that bring so much joy into our lives can be enjoyed no matter what your tastes or preferences may be. Are you that roughneck type?, try a boxer. If you're the adventurous type you can consider a 3-year old colt. Or, if you're hard up for a date try kissing fish or sheep.

There are many advantages to having a pet such as losing that lonely feeling and stress reduction. Studies have proven that being involved with your new found mate leads to lower blood pressure and can create new found relationships. If you're in to hiking and the outdoors, the Labrador Retriever is a great companion, they have great endurance, love water and won't hesitate giving you that wet, slobbery kiss.

The best places to find healthy and well maintained animals are usually accredited kennels, animal shelters or private owners. Also, by having your pet spayed or neutered, you will decrease chances of infection and help control the pet population.

If you're already thinking about getting a pet but worried about that hard-nosed landlord... do it anyway, you won't regret the lasting friendship you'll gain and your pet will be grateful because of their new home.

Screaming Trees brush off the Dust

by Joe Ryan
Collegian Staff

The Screaming Trees latest album, Dust, is an outstanding follow-up to their 1992 breakout Sweet Oblivion. Dust contains the same winning combination of intricately styled music with mesmerizing vocals as Sweet Oblivion.

The Trees also graced the main stage this summer at Lollapalooza in support of the album.

The first single, All I Know, has been granted plenty of heavy rotation on modern rock stations, MTV's 120 Minutes and has attracted many new fans.

Labeled "Hot Band" by Rolling Stones Magazine, the Trees have been downplaying their sudden recognition by playing clubs and making their occasional appearances on alternative radio shows.

The Ellensberg, Washington quartet have been playing alongside Nirvana, Pearl Jam, and Alice in Chains in the clubs of Seattle, but, unlike their colleagues, never produced an album that caught on.

Their earlier music is raw, in keeping with their label, Epic, but contains less angst than a drug-inspired mysticism.

Instead of the long, spacey trips of the late '60's psychedelic music, the band took the sonic explorations of indie guitar bands and used it for a mind-altering journey instead of an aggression-fueled form of expression.

For lead vocalist Mark Lanegan, Dust is more than just an album; it's a sudden realization. The album was inspired in part by the sobering of the band and the realization of the damage done to themselves and friends by drugs.

"Dying Days" is a song written about the early death of Lanegan's close friend, Kurt Cobain.

Lead singer Mark Lanegan was labeled by Cobain to have "the best voice in alternative music." His voice is both brash and sensitive at the same time. The Connor brothers, Van and Gary Lee, are the band's bass and guitar players, respectively. The brothers have sustained the band for years, providing post-punk guitar while staying within the traditional hard-rock structure.
