The truth can scare you!

Suspenseful, horrifying, and dramatic are all words that can be used to describe the movie The Ghost and the Darkness.

The movie, which is based on a true story, begins at the turn of the century.

Patterson (Val Kilmer), an engineer, is summoned to take part in the construction of the East African Railway. Since it has always been his dream to visit the land of Africa, he excitedly accepts the job offer.

Patterson leaves for Africa shortly after for what he considers to be the opportunity of a life time. But what starts out to be a dream come true, soon turns into a nightmare.

One peaceful night while the workers are sleeping, the campground is woken up by the sound of terrified screams. It is soon discovered that something totally horrifying has occurred. One of the workers has been pulled out of his tent, and has been killed by a pair of lions.

The killing does not stop there. The lions return night after night, preying on their next victim. The workers are terrified, and afraid to leave their living quarters. Patterson takes on the task of killing these man eaters, which the workers now refer to as the ghosts in the darkness.

This soon becomes too difficult for just one man to handle. This is when one of the most renowned lion hunters, Remington (Michael Douglas), is called in to help terminate the lions which have now killed 130 men.

I must warn you ahead of time, this movie is very violent, and gory.

So if you get woozy at the sight of blood, I would recommend seeing "First Wives Club" instead. However, if you're into all that blood and guts stuff, this movie is definitely for you.

The movie contains many suspenseful moments. I have to admit that I did find myself gripping the chair, and peaking through my hands several times through-out the film.

The Ghost and the Darkness is definitely worth your $5.75. Heck, I'd pay $5.75 just to see Val Kilmer in any movie.

STONE RETURNS ROCK: Rumor has it that Sharon Stone, who made uncrossing her legs an art in the 1994 thriller Basic Instinct, has dumped her fiancé and returned the 10-carat diamond engagement ring. Stone and her former fiancé never admitted to the engagement, saying the ring was a sign of friendship. Don't you wish you had a friend like that?

RABID FAN KILLS BRAD PITT'S POOCH: According to Los Angeles magazine, Pitt was playing surfside with his dog when a fan tossed a stick for the animal to fetch. Apparently, the fan didn't have very good aim and hit the dog on the head. The dog collapsed, leaving Pitt screaming "You killed my dog!" (sounds almost poetic). The fan fell to his knees (get your mind out of the gutter!) and attempted to revive the canine with mouth-to-muzzle resuscitation. After a few minutes, Pitt's Pooch was alive and happy again.

BOB HOPE LEAVES NBC: Bob Hope has declared himself a free agent. The ninety-three-year-old comedian took out a full-page ad in the Hollywood trades to announce that he is ending his sixty-year relationship with NBC. "Guess what? I've decided to become a FREE AGENT! . . . So, watch out, Michael Jordan!" Hope added that "I've enjoyed sixty memorable years with NBC. Sixty years . . . I started before the peacock--and he wound up taking my parking space." Hope did not say what he planned to do after his contract with NBC expires, but his publicist insists that the king of the one-liners is not retiring.
