Police Log

March 30: Police and Safety officers raided the Academic Building after reports of loud music, strobe lights and a "marijuana odor." Officers discovered a secret meeting of the humanities and social science professors, who were watching Cheech and Chong movies. The meeting had become a party when an anonymous non-student professor lit a joint and began singing Kumbya My Lord.... "Don't bring me down, pig," said one disgruntled English professor as she was being cuffed.

March 31: Officers discovered a stolen yogurt machine by following pink dribble marks to the Office of Student Affairs. The alleged thief's name was not released, he is known only as the "guy upstairs."

March 31: A student was arrested after discovered running naked through campus. According to officers, the student was protesting Penn State's failure to earn number one ranking as party school.

March 31: Busy night. Police and Safety officers arrested Police and Safety officers for offering young women big beers for their panties.

April 1: A tall white-haired man was arrested after running across campus naked except for a pair of muddy wing-tips. "It just looked like fun," he said after his frisking. "How fun is a full body cavity check?" replied the officer on duty.

April 1: John Lilley, Provost and Dean, had his office raided today after a Budweiser truck pulled up to the Glenhill Farmhouse and unloaded 45 kegs of Bud and Bud Light. "I called to report a skunky beer," said the Dean. "And all hell broke loose." Officers also discovered an intoxicated Chris Rizzo, Assistant Dean of Students, attempting a keg stand without using his hands.

April 2: A disgruntled commuter student held the Erie Hall lot hostage with a potato gun attempting to thwart resident students from parking in the lot. Officers attempted to arrest the student but later joined in the protest pegging students who don't park between the lines with Idaho's finest spuds.

April 3: Two female students were arrested leaving the restrooms in the Reed Union Building for "getting the seat wet."

April 3: An inebriated biology student was arrested after peeing in a beaker. Screaming, "SAVE THE GERMINS!!!!!" She was pulled from the classroom, following a storm of flying test tubes and petri dishes. "My eyes! My eyes!" was all that could be heard throughout the Nick building.

April 4: Two Collision editors were reported missing. The two were last seen wandering State Street near Scully's singing, "Show me the way to the next whiskey bar...."
