

I Know What Boys Like....

Chivalry is a forgotten art in today's society. Although, so is expecting chivalrous deeds. Why do women feel the need to not allow men to open doors, pay for dinner, or walk between the woman and traffic while walking on the sidewalk? Ladies, these are things that you should expect from men. When you get to a door, you should wait for him to open it, even it means waiting there all day. Sooner or later he will catch on. Give us guys the chance to be gentlemen. This is what you want in the long run anyway. With the lack of decent males out there today, you should be supporting the idea of chivalry. It's not about domination or "brown nosing." Its about courtesy and respect for the mothers of our world.

It's time for you ladies to stop complaining about men not having manners. Take some action, and dump those losers that you call boyfriends. There are men out there who will treat you as you want. And ladies, don't dare complain and then not allow a man to show that his mama taught him manners.

What A Girl Wants....

Admittedly, this is a tough one. Chivalry is not dead, you just have to know when and where to use it.

Opening doors: car doors—yes. Every door in the building, especially when you have to kill yourself to get to it before we do—not so much. It makes us feel like a lady when you go out of your way for us. It probably goes back to the days when Og clubbed small dinosaurs and brought them back to Oggette. But unless you are dating some sort of princess-in-training, we will not be offended if we have to open our own doors occasionally.

Paying for dinner: if you are rich and she is poor, feel free to pick up the bill. If both of you are poor, then suck up your pride and let her drop a couple of dollars on you. (Otherwise, you'll just have to work more to cover dates, and we already discussed time management last week).

Strolling (that's walking for you guys): always walk on the side of her that is closest to the street so that you would be the first line of defense if a car were to careen out of control. This really shows you care about our safety, and it allows you to demonstrate your manly protective skills.
