TEN LITTLE INDIANS

The Studio Theatre's presentation of Agatha Christie's Ten Little Indians will begin on Friday, October 20, at 8:00 p.m. in the Studio Theatre. Tickets are on sale at the RUB Desk, at $3 for students and $5 for the general public. Performances will take place on October 20, 21, 24, 25, 26, and 27 at 8:00 p.m. and on October 22 and 28 at 2:30 p.m.

This mystery-comedy is set on an island off the coast of Devon, England. Eight unsuspecting guests have been invited for a weekend retreat to the Owens home, though none of the guests have ever met their hosts. Nor have the guests ever met each other. Even more bizarre, the household servants have never met their employers. And so commences a humorously baffling weekend that will soon turn bloody.

The title for the play is derived from ten Indian statuettes that are huddled on a mantle in the house. Shortly after all the guests arrive, one of the statues falls from the mantle and breaks. Immediately afterward, one of the guests dies. And then there were nine.

The remaining guests must decipher the clues left for them to determine who will be the next to fall, and why. Little by little they will fit the pieces together, but they may not be quick enough. Who will be the "one little Indian boy, left all alone?"

Tickets for Ten Little Indians are $3 for students and $5 for the general public. To reserve your seat, please call the RUB Desk at 6242.

POET LINDA HOGAN COMMENCES NEW SPEAKER SERIES

Poet, novelist, and essayist Linda Hogan will be the first speaker of the newly created Diversity Through Poetry Series at Penn State Erie, The Behrend College. Hogan will present "Solar Storms" on Monday, November 6, at 7:00 p.m. in the Reed Union Building Commons. This event is free and open to the public.

Hogan, a Chickasaw poet and professor at the University of Colorado, has taught writing workshops at various universities and Indian and rural communities. Some of her most notable commendations include a National Endowment for the Arts grant, a Guggenheim fellowship, a Minnesota Arts Board Grant, and a Colorado Writers fellowship.

"Linda Hogan has wrapped wonder and magic around some brutal American truths. Neither magic nor truth is diminished by the association," wrote Los Angeles Times writer Barbara Kingsolver of Hogan's 1990 novel, Mean Spirit. The novel was one of three finalists for a Pulitzer Prize in 1991.

Solar Storms is a more recent novel by Hogan, written in 1995. It is the story of a young Native American woman in the 1970s who, while searching for her mother, finds herself caught between the worlds of her birth and of her ancestry.

Other works by Hogan include Seeing Through the Sun, The Book of Medicines, and a collection of sixteen essays titled Dwellings: Reflections on the Natural World.

LIGHT AND COLOR

Dr. Jonathan Hall, instructor of physics, will lecture on "Light and Color" on Thursday, November 2, at 7:30 p.m. His presentation, part of the Open House Night in Astronomy Series, will take place in Science 101. The lecture is free and intended for a non-technical audience.

Why do newborn babies have blue eyes? Why do most stars appear colorless to our eyes, but are vibrantly colorful in photographs? Why do leaves turn colors in the fall? These questions and many more will be addressed by Hall in his presentation.

He will explain how colors exist in nature and how the human eye perceives color. Knowledge of these processes is used in many professions and applications: artists, decorators, printers, and web page designers all make use of this knowledge on a daily basis.

Weather permitting, there will be astronomical observing following the lecture. For more information, contact the School of Science at 6105.
