BEHREND BECKONS WITH BABES IN ARMS

When the Rodgers and Hart musical Babes in Arms opened on Broadway in 1937, it was about a group of kids who plan to put on a show in a barn. At Penn State Behrend, it is about a group of kids who plan to put on a show in a gym—Penn State Behrend's new ARC.

The Behrend production is scheduled for tonight and Saturday, at 8:00 p.m. and Sunday, March 25, at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are available by calling x6242.

Babes in Arms focuses on the fun, frustrations, and romances of a group of college-age would-be actors and actresses at a summer theatre in New England. When their tyrannical producer works them so hard that they never have a chance to showcase their talents, the group decides to produce their own show on their own time.

While the plot of Babes in Arms is simple, the music is not. The show contains some of Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart's most memorable and time-tested songs: Where or When, I Wish I Were in Love Again, My Funny Valentine, Johnny One Note, and The Lady is a Tramp. Dr. Gary Viebranz, who heads the college's instrumental music programs, will oversee the orchestra for the show, and Dr. Daniel Barnard, head of choral music programs, will oversee the vocalists. Behrend graduate Geoff Bach will choreograph the dance numbers.
