Please get some culture byMaria Barron staff writer

Some students have expressed concern relating to the number of (or lack of) intellectually stimulating activities to attend in Erie. Although many aren't easily accessible to the students at Behrend, some options are available. For those of you who are interested in broadening your horizons beyond fraternity parties and other such "drinking clubs," there may just be a dim light flickering at the end of your tunnel.

The Erie Playhouse (located in downtown Erie, across the street from the Avalon Hotel) offers a number of different theatrical presentations throughout the year. Currently it is putting on the play "Picnic," a 1950s romantic comedy that takes place entirely in the shared backyard of two women. The cast includes Behrend's own theater teacher, Paula Barrett, whose character gets extremely drunk and forces a poor old man to marry her.

 If you know her, attendance to this performance is highly encouraged. One will not regret the trip.

"Picnic" closes on Sunday. To find out about apcoming performances and order tickets, call 454-2852 ext. 41 between 9 a.m. and 4:30p.m. on Mondaythrough Friday and between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Saturday. Or visit their website, www.erieplayhouse.org.

Although frequented by the elderly population of Erie, The Playhouse provides entertainment for the young and old. The acting in its performances is surprisingly impressive and ticket prices are reasonable ($10 per student). Go out and experience something cultured, something of substance. Anything important. Do it for the sake of a future generation that may very well include alcoholics and closedminded underachievers who have never read a book for pleasure, or watched a film with subtitles ("Crouching Tiger Hidden Dragon" doesn't count).

"Picnic," will be playing until October 27, 2002 at the Erie Playhouse.

Ih your search for things to do in Erie do not overlook the Blasco Memorial Library and the many theatrical presentations put on throughout the city.

The Beacon will try its best to keep you as updated as possible on all upcoming events, especially those that might aid in our development as well-rounded individuals. If anyone knows of any such upcoming events please e-mail the Beacon at BEHRCOLL@aol.com. We welcome all appropriate suggestions.

Because the Beacon empathizes with those of you who wear the straightjacket that is Behrend without a car. An opportunity exists to experience the theater right here on campus. A production called "6xIves" will open in the theater (the building that looks like a little brown shack) across from Turnbull (the building that looks like a big brown barn) on Friday, Nov. 15 and run almost every night until Sunday, Nov. 24. The show runs several days due to a maximum capacity of 60 people in the theater at one time. The name "6xIves" is not very selfexplanatory, but the Beacon will most assuredly keep you well informed as to the productions' content as opening night draws closer.

So the next time you think to yourself, "I'm bored, maybe I will go out drinking tonight..." do your mind a favor and do something with a little more depth. Visit the Erie Playhouse, "6xIves" or (heaven forbid) pick up a book.

The Sims is so rad

by Patrick Kambert Chicago Tribune

The psychology of The Sims can get pretty, uh, unusual.

Though some players use Sims to let off steam, others find the best way to let off steam is to watch their Sims characters get steamy.

Some Sims fans have "Xrated love bed" downloads totally unsanctioned by Maxis that get rid of the blur and the blankets when Sims characters get together.

And if size matters to either gender, well, there are programs to alter the Sim bodies to any measurements you want.

A few Sims pose in their favorite threads.

"The sexual part is a great way to forget about real life for a while," said Doug Davis, 43, of Shreveport, La., who uses the game to relax after logging more than 1,000 miles on the road in his job for a tropical fish company every week.

Davis said his wife doesn't play but occasionally watches his Sims world, sans sheets, unfurl.

"She'll come up and see something and laugh," he said.

"It's a guy thing, but yet it's a woman who hosts the site that has these love beds."

Feeling lucky?
