SMITH CHAPEL ORGAN RECITAL NOV. 9

On Nov. 9, the public will have its first opportunity to hear and view the pipe organ installed earlier this year in the Larry and Kathryn Smith Chapel at Penn State Erie, The Behrend College. The organ recital, which will begin at 3 p.m., is free and open to the public. Parking is available in the Junker Center lot.

The public recital follows a private dedication ceremony and recital to be held the previous evening for the Smith family, organ builder Martin Ott, and college officials and friends. The Smith Chapel organ is also known as Opus 100, the 100th organ built by master organ builder Martin Ott of St. Louis. The instrument was given to the college by Larry and Kathryn Smith in honor of their children, Colleen and Kevin.

Opus 100 was designed specifically for the acoustics of the worship space in the Smith Chapel, making it unique architecturally and tonally. The organ is encased in oak and stands 25 feet high. It has 23 ranks made up of more than 1,200 pipes and has 21 stops.

The organ's two manual keyboards have 56 keys. The natural keys are grenadil wood, and the sharp keys are grenadil covered by cow bone. The pedal keyboards have 30 notes and are made of oak. The organ has mechanical key action, so that when a key is pressed, the corresponding pipe valve opens and wind in the air chamber passes through the pipe, producing sound.

The organist for the dedication and for the public recital will be Larry Smith, Ph.D., professor of music and chair of the organ department at Indiana University in Bloomington, Indiana. Dr. Smith's recital program will include works by Johann Sebastian Bach, Gardner Read, Paul Hindemuth, Gaston Litaize, Darius Milhaud, and Joseph Jongen.

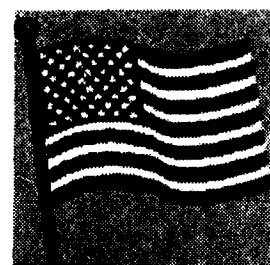

A Closer Look

EXPORTING THE AMERICAN DREAM TO THE AXIS OF EVIL

Can the American model of society be transferred abroad? Are the wealth, values, and security Americans enjoy obtainable in other cultures?

These questions and more will provide the basis for "Exporting the American Dream to the Axis of Evil," a panel discussion presented by The Institute on the American Dream at Penn State Erie, The Behrend College. The panel discussion will take place Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Smith Chapel. The event is free and open to the public, and parking is available at the Junker Center lot.

Charles Brock, director of the Institute on the American Dream, will serve as moderator. Panel participants will be Mary Al-Hasnawi of the Islamic Cultural Center; Dr. Michael Aleprete, lecturer in political science at Penn State Erie; Dr. John Gamble, professor of political science at Penn State Erie; and Dr. Baher Ghosheh of Edinboro University of Pennsylvania.
