Penn State beef cattle sale revives time-honored tradition, raises $111,000

The first beef cattle sale held by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences since 1990 generated $111,035, attracted buyers from six states, exposed a new class of students to livestock marketing and renewed a time-honored tradition. The "Penn State Proud Beef Cattle Sale," held Nov. 7 at the Beef-Sheep Center, included all of the Angus cows in the University's herd born before 1999, their calves, bred heifers and a 2-year-old bull. Commercial cows in the sale included bred cows, bred heifers, heifer calves and steer calves for a total of 99 head. Voytus Angus Farm of Pennsylvania bought the high-selling lot at $2,800. The sales teach students how to prepare cattle for merchandising and allow Penn State to share genetics with other producers.

President Spanier to visit with law school board of governors

Penn State President Graham Spanier and Executive Vice President and Provost Rodney Erickson plan to meet with the Board of Governors of the Dickinson School of Law later this week as that group begins a discussion about future directions for the institution. "Dean Philip McConaughay brought to our attention some time ago the critical facilities needs that confront the Dickinson School of Law," Spanier said. "We asked him this summer to begin an analysis of the options in Carlisle, but also to think broadly about the best academic interests of our future law students. We asked him to prepare a discussion document that he would share first with the Board of Governors, and then with the larger law school community. Friday's meeting is intended to be the first step in that discussion."

The medical minute: Thursday good day to quit smoking

The American Cancer Society's annual "Great American Smokeout" was Thursday. If you smoke, now is a good time to become a non-smoker. According to the latest edition of the Medical Minute, a service of Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center, smoking kills 440,000 Americans annually- almost one person every minute. Most smoking deaths are from lung cancer, heart disease and chronic lung disease. Before the first Surgeon General's report on the hazards of smoking in 1964, about half of adult Americans smoked. Fortunately today that number is about 22 percent overall. However, 90 percent of us have nicotine in our blood from secondhand smoke, which causes about 3,000 lung cancer deaths yearly among non-smokers.

THON carnival reunites families, students

The Eighth Annual THON Family Carnival was held in White Building on Penn State's University Park campus Sunday. Four Diamonds families from across the state reunited with Penn State students and fellow Four Diamonds families at the "Sweetest THON Carnival" themed event. The carnival is held in conjunction with the Penn State IFC/Panhellenic Dance Marathon, the largest student-run philanthropy in the world, benefiting The Four Diamonds Fund for families with children who have cancer being treated at Penn State Children's Hospital. Four Diamonds families had the opportunity to participate in games, make arts and crafts and enjoy entertainment provided by Penn State students.
