

HUMOR

"And if I fart before I wake, I pray my lover Dutch Oven to bake..." -Ancient Manuscript

Halloween Costumes: Inspiration for those who are uninspired

Since imitation is the highest form of flattery (and bad imitation is a common characteristic of most Halloween costumes) here is a list of things you should do (and not do) this Halloween. If nothing else, hopefully this will offer some new and exciting recycled ideas for your costume this year.

Bad Idea: Adolf Hitler (World War II: The Sequel)
To many people, this might come off as tasteless... and it's already been done by every type of person, from red-headed Irishmen, to blonde-haired, blue eyed hermaphrodites..

Good Idea: Charlie Chaplin AS Adolf Hitler (The Great Dictator)
Nobody makes fun of the Fuhrer better than the little tramp Charlie Chaplin. Chaplin was one of the first to make a satirical film making fun of Hitler. Heil Chaplin!

Bad Idea: Mario and Princess (Super Mario Bros.)
In theory, this should be the perfect couple-costume setup, but in practice, this works as well as Communism. You either have a hot Princess and fugly Mario, or a fat ugly Princess, and a fugly Mario.

Good Idea: Gordon Freeman and Alyx Vance (Half-Life 2)
What do you get when you mix a crowbar, a physicist, and an alien invasion? You get a couple of kickass costumes for Halloween. If you need to go stag, just say you're playing as Gordon in the first Half-Life!

Bad Idea: Captain Jack Sparrow (Pirates of the Caribbean)
Arms flailing, only worried about himself, and eaten by a giant squid thing, Jack Sparrow is one of the most over-hyped characters of the 21st century. Funny in the first PoTC, annoying in the second, and on an acid trip in the last, this is one character you should avoid this Halloween.

Good Idea: Inigo Montoya (The Princess Bride)
This guy can take three sword wounds and still kicks the bad guy's ass. Dust off your spanish accent and people will instantly recognize the 20+ year old phrase: "HALLO! MY NAME IS INIGO MONTOYA! YOU KILLED MY FATHER! PREPARE TO DIE!"

Bad Idea: Norman Bates (Psycho)
Unless you want to dress up in your mother's clothes, this costume, though classic, is old news. This guy passes as creepy when "normal" and is too scared to attack his victims till they're vulnerable in the shower... Wuss.

Good Idea: Patrick Bateman (American Psycho)
Bateman has one thing Norman doesn't... Balls. Bateman has the balls to run down his apartment hallway naked with a chainsaw and drop it on his victim's head off a flight of stairs. All you need is a business suit, a clear raincoat, an axe, and "It's Hip to be Square" by Huey Lewis and the News.

WORLD 9-4

THANK YOU MARIO!

BUT YOUR BROTHER LUIGI ALREADY FIXED THE TOILET.

PUSH ANY BUTTON TO SHOOT YOURSELF.

Disclaimer: All articles are for entertainment purposes only.