Weekly Horoscopes

Jeremy Korwek
Part-Time Astrologer

ARIES
Adventurous day. Do you feel like having an adventure? Today your scarf will get caught in the bus door and the driver won't notice until 12th and Peach.

TAURUS
Different strokes for different folks. Don't try to paint that fake Monet this week, the FBI has been watching lately and they're getting ready to make a move. So toss those art supplies and books and head to Peru.

GEMINI
Shiny happy person. You might want to see Doctor X about that metallic rash. Those spray tan booths are only meant to be used once a week.

CANCER
Take time for both. Your real girlfriend and your cyber-girl friend are feeling left out. You might want to double check the gender of your cyber-girlfriend, all signs indicate that she is not a she.

LEO
People power. A company in Texas will buy your idea for a giant human powered hamster wheel generator. Congratulations, you'll soon be a multi-millionaire and will end the energy crisis.

VIRGO
Out in front. Time to tell your parents that your girlfriend is a RealDoll.

LIBRA
Make up your mind. The indecision is killing me, Obama or Clinton? Paul or McCain? Manual or Automatic? Almond Joy or Mounds?

SCORPIO
Can you avoid money? Probably not seeing as how you're going to rear end a bank truck on the highway.

SAGITTARIUS
Relationship elevator going up. Not for you, well not this week at least, your significant other is spending more time with their engineering books than you.

CAPRICORN
Better shape. The answer to your problem lies in the truncated dodecahedron. Try it with Pu-239 but watch out for those pesky burns.

AQUARIUS
The language of love. After last week's utter disaster, that "dating for dummies" book will arrive tomorrow. Soon the rabbits will visit and you'll need all the help you can get.

PISCES
Back to the simple things. With the spy satellite destroyed, we are at our most vulnerable, gather your things and head for the hills.
