Restaurant review: QUAKER STEAK

There's only one local restaurant whose reputation is based on food described to get your "pores steamin', ears a hummin', and temples throbbin'." Quaker Steak & Lube, located on Peach Street, is currently a college student hot spot, mainly because it is offering an exciting and creative list of new flavors that can't be found anywhere else.

The menu offers a wide range of options, including appetizers, wings, steak, ribs, soups, salads, sandwiches, and desserts, but the selection process usually narrows down to one important section of the menu: the enormous wing sauce list.

This is a nineteen-flavor-long chart that guides curious wing lovers what to pick next based on Scoville Heat Units (which is the number of units of water it takes to make a certain amount of chile pepper lose all traces of heat). It ranges from zero to 30,001, and is described in four heat levels. The Quaker Steak & Lube staff is daring you to try their 150,000 SHU Atomic Wings, but if you can't handle the heat, they aren't responsible. You have to sign a form before trying them. The menu explains that studies indicate this wing sauce actually stimulates nerve fibers in the brain to release an aphrodisiac hormone. Now that is something to experiment with.

When stopping in Quaker Steak & Lube for a quick dinner or hanging out on a Friday night, Behrend students are offered a tip on which items are featured according to the manager. The Wing & Rib Combo, consisting of a generous portion of Jumbo Wings, fries, and a tender half rack of ribs, is the meal you've been waiting to dive into all week.

Quaker Steak also offers a unique Premium Pretzel appetizer that is made perfectly warm, soft, and flaky on the inside with a crispy baked outside sprinkled with salt. It is a great pair with a beer, and is served with a tangy beer-cheese dip spiked with Guinness.

"I really enjoy the burgers here," says front store manager Shannon. "These aren't the burgers you buy for a vegetarian. They are pure, thick, juicy, authentic one-of-a-kind burgers that you can really indulge
